BIRMINGHAM

WE'RE GOING ON A BEAR HUNT

There is an extra special reason to visit central Bear-mingham this summer after Central BID Birmingham installed its latest stunning sculpture trail.

Ten beautifully designed bears are on display across the city centre for families to enjoy, take photographs and support Birmingham Children's Hospital Charity at the same time.

The stunning trail will remain in place throughout the summer school holidays. It is inspired by the award-winning animation, based on the much-loved picture book We're Going on a Bear Hunt by Michael Rosen and illustrated by Helen Oxenbury.

Central BID Birmingham is the Business Improvement District for the city centre retail and leisure area, and is working with art producer Wild in Art, and the world's leading independent publisher of children's books, Walker Books, to embark on this latest creative partnership for the summer of 2024.

JUMP FOR JOY

Talawa Theatre Company present a retelling of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night - set on the jazz scene in 1940s Harlem...

Talawa Theatre Company have been championing Black artists in theatre, and reflecting Black experiences through their work, since 1986. This year they're presenting Black Joy Season, an initiative which seeks to connect and nurture Black communities around the country. At its heart is Play On!, a stylish retelling of Twelfth Night, with music inspired by Duke Ellington and New York's Cotton Club. Talawa's artistic director, Michael Buffong, talks to What's On about the project...

What's your earliest memory of a theatre experience, Michael?

I think maybe a pivotal theatre experience was when I was about 17 or 18 and I went to see a youth theatre show at Theatre Royal Stratford East. That was when I decided: That's what I want to do. I want to be a part of those people, on that stage, or the people making the theatre - whatever it is, I want to do that.

Is that what steered you towards a career in the arts?

Not consciously, because I wasn't aware that that was something you could do... It wasn't until I saw that youth theatre show that I thought 'Oh my goodness, you can do this! How do I do that?' I think maybe like most young people, you kind of fantasise about being an actor - it generally tends to be movie based or TV based, but the show I saw was happening in front of my eyes, and they were the same age as me, and they spoke like me, looked like me, they sang, they were funny and they could make you cry, all at the same time. I thought 'Yeah, I want to do that; that's what I want to do.'

Can you explain the ethos behind Talawa Theatre Company?

Talawa was set up in 1986 by three very strong Black women: Yvonne Brewster, Carmen Munroe and Mona Hammond. And also Inigo Espejel. The reason for it coming into existence back then was that there was a real belief that Black actors actually couldn't be in the lead roles and couldn't do the classics - they couldn't do Shakespeare, they couldn't do classic comedies like Oscar Wilde. I think that the ethos behind the company was to prove that that was very much a lie.

There is a need to be in control of telling our own stories as Black artists absolutely, rather than it being decided for you what stories you can tell. I think one of the drivers for Talawa is to tell our own stories from our own perspective, and that means a wide spectrum of experiences... Talawa exists to tell a plethora of stories from the Black perspective.

What's the thing you're proudest of during your time as the company's artistic director?

The thing I'm really, really proud of, having been artistic director for the past 12 years, is actually the ecosystem we've built within the company, for artists. I think we have a really strong pipeline within the company for writers or directors; we're definitely looking at providing something similar for producers as well. The scenario would be, for instance, as a writer you can send your play into Talawa, to our free script-reading service; that play would be read, and you'd get a report; if it's really good, it gets a second report, and if it shows real promise, someone might think 'Maybe we should think of this for our new writing festival.' Our writing festival is an opportunity to platform a lot of Black artists.

What was behind your decision to select this particular play?

Julie Clare, who is a commercial producer, sought me out, said 'I think I've got something you might like,' and sent me the script for Play On!, which I hadn't heard of until that time.

Play On! is essentially a take on Twelfth Night. It's set in very early 1940s New York, in Harlem at the Cotton Club. It's the story of a young woman called Viola who wants to study songwriting with the Duke, who runs the Cotton Club. The Duke, we are told, doesn't teach women, so she disguises herself as a young man and gets an introduction to the Duke to show her songs. The Duke is in love with the diva of the Cotton Club, and sends this young man with his songs off to woo her... and, of course, she falls instantly in love with Vy in disguise. It's a story of unrequited love and mistaken identity.

The cast have to be multi-talented, to embody virtuoso jazz musicians. What was the auditioning process like?

First up, this cast is insane - the amount of talent... I have seen some talented people, and this company is off the scale, seriously. They came in, they auditioned, and I thought 'I wish I could have you all!' It was a wonderful process, and on one level very humbling, just to be surrounded by so much talent. The person who's going to play Lady Liv, the diva, is absolutely incredible, and our lead woman, Viola. They are amazing - you just have to wait and see! I can't tell you with words what they're like - I was blown away, and that was just the audition!

Play On! is part of your Black Joy Season. What else will be happening?

It's an absolute first - it's one of the biggest projects we've undertaken. The Black Joy Season is us linking up with Black regional hubs throughout the country; so we're linking up with artists in the Midlands, in Liverpool, Bristol...

In the centre is Play On!, which is the musical, and round it we've got a new studio commission, which is music based, which will then go on tour later in the year and into next year. There are six seed commissions - one for each one of our hubs - which really is kickstarting some new work. Then there's Q&As, there's wrap-around events... We're looking at quite a big piece of work that goes around the country. It's a first for us, and it's going to be amazing.

What makes Play On! a perfect fit for the season?

It's the fact that it's so joyful. I mean, the whole season's called Black Joy, but Play On! - you're going to come out singing, with a big smile on your face; you're going to feel elated and uplifted after this piece of work. There is no doubt about that in my mind; that's what you're going to be left with.

What's next for Talawa, once the show is on the road?

Well, we've got a big outdoor show coming next year, which we're really looking forward to. We did an outdoor show last year called The Tide, which was about immigration - a very moving piece of work. We're working on something with Sonia Hughes, who is a well-known artist who does installations outdoors, and with Fubonation, who are a dance company, and we put these two artists together.

They're going to be working on a piece that's around the Black male body, in celebration of that. I know that's something that Sonia is really passionate about, and we're hoping it will be delivered this time next year. Look out for that - that will be the next big thing.

Play On! shows at Coventry's Belgrade Theatre from Monday 23 September until Saturday 5 October. The play also tours to Birmingham Hippodrome from Wednesday 6 to Saturday 9 November

ALFRESCO DINING

If the sun decides to show itself this month, there will only be one place in which to enjoy a delicious meal and glass or two of something relaxing: the great outdoors! Check out our six alfresco dining recommendations below...

Native

Pensons Farm, Tenbury Wells, WR15 8RT

Chef Ivan Tisdall-Downes and business partner Imogen Davis, the dynamic duo behind the zero-waste Native restaurant brand, have taken over the former Pensons site.

Benefitting from a beautiful rural location in the Malvern Hills, the venue offers a hyper-sustainable, modern British fine dining experience. Menus include: four courses for £65pp, seven courses for £105pp, and a Sunday lunch three-course offering at £45pp.

RSC Rooftop Restaurant

Waterside, Stratford-upon-Avon, CV37 6BB

The RSC's Rooftop Restaurant, located on the third floor of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, offers visitors the opportunity to dine outside on the balconies overlooking the River Avon and Bancroft Gardens.

With seasonal food being served all day, the restaurant is a perfect place in which to enjoy a light lunch, a lazy afternoon tittle or a pre-show dinner (a fixed-priced pre-theatre menu is available on days when a production is showing on stage downstairs).

Fleur de Lys

Lapworth Street, Lowsonford, Henley-in-Arden, B95 5HJ

Popular village pub Fleur de Lys has recently been named by online restaurant-reservation service company OpenTable as one of the top 100 restaurants for outdoor dining. Praised for being 'ideally situated for walkers and ramblers who wish to explore the canal towpath or a variety of local walks', and for its 'great homemade food and inviting atmosphere', the pub sits by the Stratford Canal, near to winding country roads that used to be part of the Forest of Arden.

The Old Coffee Tavern

16 The Old Square, Warwick, CV34 4RA

Ideally situated between St Mary's Church and the square, The Old Coffee Tavern is a popular place to gather and enjoy a range of local products, from real ales and craft beers to meat cooked over the robata grill and 'the best Sunday roast in Warwick'. This traditional pub has maintained its characterful charm from the days of Dale's coffee tavern, and during the summer months invites its visitors to bask in sunlight on the secret outdoor terrace.

The Almanack

89 Abbey End, North, Kenilworth, CV8 1QJ

Make the most of the longer evenings and (hopefully) sunnier days by heading over to The Almanack.

Alongside a glass of bubbles, a well-made cocktail or a perfectly kept pint of local ale, August patrons can enjoy a summer menu featuring dishes such as Devon crab cake with creamy avocado, spicy radish and sweet pea shoots; miso-glazed cod with black rice, choy sum and lime; and 14-hour slow-cooked beef & ale pie.

The George

Watling Street, Kilsby, CV23 8YE

Boasting a pergola area, bespoke timber seating and planters, The George's garden & alfresco dining area has been a big hit with locals since it opened last year. The revamped village pub's menu has gone down a treat too, with top-quality traditional pub classics sitting alongside a selection of Asian-inspired dishes. There's an impressive menu available for vegan diners too, while the venue's cocktails have also received an enthusiastic thumbs-up.

QUEEN OF BLUES

Elkie Brooks talks to What's On ahead of her Shrewsbury Folk Festival debut...

With an impressive 60-plus years in the music industry behind her and a phenomenal 20 albums under her belt, Elkie Brooks continues to hold (quite rightly) the title of British Queen of Blues. Kicking off her new tour, The Long Farewell, at Shrewsbury Folk Festival late this month, she recently took time out to chat to What's On about playing live gigs, touring with the stars, and being a black belt in Aikido...

Singer Elkie Brooks is looking forward to headlining Shrewsbury Folk Festival this month, but she recalls that some of her early festivals were far from comfortable.

"Some places that I've done years ago were terrible backstage," says Elkie, whose career has spanned more than 60 years. "I've been in the business a long time, and when I was in bands in the 70s, with Dada and Vinegar Joe, we were always doing festivals. You got used to the backstage, and I used to carry a little screen so that I could just go behind the screen and get changed in the same room as all the lads because they just never sorted out separate facilities.

"And there have been times when I've done these festivals before as a solo artist, where I've actually changed in the van which belonged to our guy who did the PA equipment. That's what it was like in those days."

As a child, Elkie sang at weddings and bar mitzvahs, with her unofficial debut coming at a club in Manchester when she was 13. Her big break came at the age of 15 when she won a local talent competition.

She released her first single, a cover of Etta James' 'Something's Got A Hold On Me', in 1964 and since then has recorded a string of top-10 albums and singles, including Pearl's 'A Singer', which reached number eight in the UK Singles Chart, and 'No More The Fool', which reached number five. Her 1981 album, 'Pearls', sold more than a million copies and charted for 79 weeks, making Elkie the biggest-selling female album artist in the history of the UK pop charts at that time.

Known as the British Queen of Blues, her career has seen her working or touring with a host of top stars, including The Beatles, Small Faces, Cat Stevens, Robert Palmer and The Animals - so she's had plenty of time to hone her live festival skills.

"I have to appreciate that my fans will want to hear all my hits, and I'll be doing most of them which are good live. I think I'd get lynched if I didn't do Pearl's 'A Singer', and 'Sunshine After The Rain', and 'Fool If You Think It's Over', and 'Don't Cry Out Loud'. So I'll obviously be doing all those, but I shall be incorporating a few other things as well which are good live songs to keep everyone going.

"My attitude is one of complete and utter focus and concentration on the music, and if I deter from that I do not enjoy myself. That has always been my attitude. When you've been 19 years old and singing at The Beatles' Christmas Show and having all these screaming girls just screaming all the way through your performance and wanting The Beatles and not really taking any notice of you, you become a bit tough about it all. My attitude is 'I'm going to sing this, and if you want to enjoy it, then please, that would be wonderful, but if you don't, I'm going to do it anyway!'"

Taking place at West Midlands Showground across the bank holiday weekend, Shrewsbury Folk Festival 2024 has a packed line-up which also features Ladysmith Black Mambazo, Gangstagrass and Eric Bibb, as well as a strong presence in terms of women performers; Jacqui McShee, Beth Nielsen Chapman, Kathryn Tickell, Mary Black, Ward Thomas and Mary Gauthier all feature on the bill.

Elkie admits that it wasn't always easy being a female singer breaking onto the scene in the 1960s.

"Back in the day it was more or less what you looked like, and there is still an element of that now. But there have been, and there are, some wonderful singers who were incredibly talented, and their talent has seen them through. My first influences were women like Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday, Dakota Staton. They were extremely talented, with great voices, great phrasing and great pitching, and that's how they got through.

"To me, the music has always been the most important thing; that's what I care about. I think it's wonderful that so many women are coming through and have always been there."

Elkie's 2024 tour, during which she plays Shrewsbury's Theatre Severn in November, is called 'The Long Farewell' - a wry look at the fact she turns 80 next year.

"I'm thankfully at the moment reasonably fit for my age. I work out most days - I do a good hour. I'm a black belt in Aikido. I took my black belt when I was 50 and I have continued training.

"So I am quite fit, but then I'll have to judge it year by year. I still might be doing lots of shows in a couple of years' time... I just have to take it as it comes, but it's going to be a very, very long farewell tour, I hope."

Not only does Elkie work on her physical fitness levels, she also ensures she continues training her voice.

"For my 70th birthday my wonderful family bought me this fantastic piano, a baby grand piano, and I sit and play every night - and the neighbours are very happy," she laughs. "I practise most days; very rarely I don't do at least an hour sitting at the piano and singing. I have the routine that I do because if you don't use it, you lose it.

"I would say to people who are starting out and want to be singers in the business that it really helps if you can play an instrument like the piano or the guitar. I'm not bad on keyboards, I can accompany myself and I love it, but I'm absolutely awful at the guitar. You know Phoebe - the woman who tries to play the guitar in Friends? I make her sound like Eric Clapton!"

Elkie is also keeping busy with new material - and festival-goers may receive a sneak preview.

"My son Jay and his wife Joanna manage me, and we're working on an album. We're releasing the album in sections - three or four songs, and then a few months later we'll do a few more, and the album in its entirety hopefully by the end of the year; if not, the beginning of next year. So at the festival I might do some songs from the new album - along with lots of hits."

Elkie Brooks plays the final day of Shrewsbury Folk Festival, which takes place at the West Mid Showground from Friday 23 to Monday 26 August. Elkie then returns to the region with The Long Farewell Tour, performing at Shrewsbury's Theatre Severn on Wednesday 6 November and Birmingham Town Hall on Friday 28 February

Festivals coming to the region in August & September

Lakefest

Eastnor Castle, Wed 7 - Sun 11 August

Priding itself on putting family first, Lakefest evolved from a giant music and cider festival at Croft Farm Waterpark, Tewkesbury, back in 2011, when performers included The Wurzels and entertainment came in the form of skittles and welly wanging.

Alongside an always-impressive line-up of music acts, the get-together also features fairground rides and a good selection of family-friendly activities.

2024 line-up includes: The Stranglers, The Libertines (pictured), Rudimental, Olly Murs, Jake Bugg and The Twang

Shrewsbury Folk Festival

West Mid Showground, Shrewsbury,
Fri 23 - Mon 26 August

A highlight of any folk fan's calendar, this four-day fest brings together centuries of musical tradition in one picturesque setting. Steeped in history, the border town of Shrewsbury provides an ideal backdrop for the festival's mash-up of modern, medieval and everything in between, where grassroots cultures collide in dynamic fusion styles. Take along the whole family for dance and workshops as well as live music.

2024 line-up includes: Elkie Brooks, Eric Bibb, Bella Hardy, Lady Made, Manran, Ladysmith Black Mambazo (pictured), Mary Black, Peatbog Faeries, Spiers & Boden and The Magpies

Lichfield Festival Of Folk

Various locations across the city,
Sun 15 September - Sat 5 October

A friendly event which has developed a devoted following of discerning music fans, the Lichfield Festival Of Folk - or L2F, as it's otherwise known - features not only an impressive programme of music but also free community-based get-togethers, an arts & heritage procession, art and songwriting competitions, song sessions and more.

2024 line-up includes: Painted Sky, Granny's Attic (pictured), The Magpies, Danny Bradley, Jim Causley and Miranda Sykes

Moseley Folk & Arts Festival

Moseley Park, Birmingham,
Fri 30 August - Sun 1 September

Tucked away behind Birmingham's busy streets, the beautiful Moseley Park is one of the city's hidden gems, transformed each year into an enchanting escape by one of the Midlands' best-loved music festivals. Traditional folk & low-fi acoustic sets blend seamlessly with dreamy electropop, psychedelia and indie favourites against a magical backdrop of bright hippie colours, lush foliage and a beautiful lake. Alongside the music, the festival - which is now in its 18th year - also features a mixture of activities for all ages to enjoy.

2024 line-up includes: Belle & Sebastian, Levellers, Dexys, Flogging Molly, Kate Rusby, CMAT (pictured), Lisa O'Neill and Beans On Toast

Festivals coming to the region in August & September

Off The Tracks Summer Festival

Donington Park Farmhouse, Castle Donington, Fri 30 August - Sun 1 September

Voted by the Times as the top 'small is beautiful' festival, the family-friendly Off The Tracks event has been around for three decades and is many things to many people. "It's friendly, relaxing, memorable, exciting, a place to escape and a place to meet new friends," say its organisers. "Once you've been, we bet you'll want to come back! Flee to the countryside, let your hair down, chill out and escape the humdrum of everyday life."

2024 line-up includes: Peatbog Faeries (pictured) Dub Pistols, The Beat feat Rankin Jnr, Banco De Gaia, The Leylines, Black Water County, Dr Trippy and Roving Crows

Bromyard Folk Festival

Bromyard Town Football Club, Thurs 5 - Sun 8 September

Established in 1968 and situated in the beautiful rolling green fields of Herefordshire, Bromyard has become a much-loved celebration of folk music. The event sees some of the finest national and international folk musicians headlining a programme that also includes workshops, ceilidhs, dance displays, children's entertainment and a traditional craft market.

2024 line-up includes: Martin Simpson (pictured), Oysterband, Spiers & Boden, Fay Field Trio, O'Hooley & Tidow, Gnoss, Granny's Attic and Mick Ryan

Centenary Square Summer Series

Centenary Square, Birmingham, Fri 23 - Mon 26 August

This brand-new outdoor concert series will transform Birmingham's iconic Centenary Square into a hub of live music, bookended by headline artists from across the city. With ambitions to be one of the greenest events on the summer calendar, the series will be powered solely by the national grid and free of single-use plastic.

2024 line-up includes: The Streets (pictured), Jungle, Cian Ducrot and Ocean Colour Scene

Páirc Festival

New Irish Centre, Birmingham, Sat 24 & Sun 25 August

Returning for a third year with a two-day celebration of Irish music and culture, Páirc will feature a mix of international headline acts and local talent. The event promises fun for all the family and comes complete with street food, beer and festival merchandise.

2024 line-up includes: Bob Geldof (pictured), Nathan Carter, Boyzlife, The Tumbling Paddies, Riverdance, Whistlin' Donkeys and Ruaile Buaile

Crooked House In The Park

Beacon Park, Lichfield, Sun 25 August

After a sold-out 2023 edition, Crooked House In The Park returns for 2024.

Expect 12 hours of house, garage, trance, old skool and drum & bass across six stages from world-renowned DJs, artists and performers, all combined with phenomenal sound and visuals.

On top of this, VIP and VVIP areas, immersive brand activations, on-site games & competitions, and a huge variety of food & drink vendors will be available to elevate your experience.

2024 line-up includes: Claptone (pictured), Wilkinson, Hannah Wants, Eats Everything, Low Steppa, So Solid Crew, Mungos HiFi, David Penn and Sasasas

Camp Festival

Weston Park, Shropshire/Staffordshire border, Thurs 15 - Sun 18 August

Camp Festival is making a welcome return to the Midlands following two successful years. A stand-alone event (but boasting all the unique and essential family-friendly elements of Dorset's original Camp Festival), the four-day get-together is organised by Josie & Rob da Bank and features a fancy-dress parade, 'an action-packed accumulation of screen-free activities in the expansive green spaces' and plenty of musical madness.

2024 line-up includes: Rick Astley, Orbital, Paloma Faith (pictured), The Darkness, Jake Shears, Faithless McFly, The K's, Craig Charles and The Amy Winehouse Band

A SINGULAR SENSATION

Hit musical A Chorus Line dances into Birmingham Hippodrome

Broadway comes to Brum next month when award-winning musical A Chorus Line stops off at Birmingham Hippodrome. The story focuses on a group of dancers as they're put through their paces during an audition. Actor, dancer & choreographer Adam Cooper stars in the currently touring production. What's On recently caught up with him to find out more about this latest version of the hit show, which celebrates its 50th anniversary next year...

The showbiz musical A Chorus Line is one of theatre's success stories. Opening in 1975, it became a stage sensation, picking up a host of awards and playing Broadway for 15 years. Indeed, back in the day, it was the longest-running production in Broadway history. The musical takes audiences behind the scenes at an audition, where a group of dancers have pinned their hopes on getting a slot in the chorus line. But this is to be no typical audition; director Zach doesn't only want to see their dancing skills, he also wants to learn what makes them tick, so demands they open up on their pasts and their most personal stories.

In the Leicester Curve production visiting Birmingham Hippodrome next month, the role of Zach is played by Adam Cooper, who also took the part when the production - helmed by Curve's artistic director, Nikolai Foster, and choreographed by Ellen Kane - was staged in 2021.

With a CV including being a principal dancer with Royal Ballet, playing the iconic role of the Swan/Stranger in Matthew Bourne's all-male Swan Lake, an appearance in the film Billy Elliot and countless West End shows, Adam says the role is ideal for him.

"The thing about Zach is that he's sort of a version of me in a way - I spend half of my time as a director/choreographer and half as an actor, so I could easily tap into his character.

"He's very different to me. I'm not quite as blunt as he is, and I don't lose my temper as much as he does, but I certainly know where he's coming from in trying to find different ways of discovering what people are really like."

As the would-be chorus-line members open up to Zach, he emerges as a Svengali-like figure, holding the fate of each of them in his hands. But Adam is also determined that audiences get to see the character's softer side.

"Interestingly he's normally played a lot harsher than I play him; the kind of human side of him doesn't come out so much. But that was something I was very keen to do because, for me, that is what director/choreographers are like these days. They are much more sensitive to people's feelings, rather than just 'This is what I want, and we're just going to get on and do it.'

"Zach definitely has that side to him because he's a very driven person. He comes from a background of Broadway, and a lot of them used to work like that. But because in Nikolai's production Zach is a lot more present on stage than in the original production, I have to react honestly to the stories I'm hearing.

"If someone is telling me a story and it moves me, then I can't ignore that as a character; it would be inhuman of me. That is what is really nice about this production - it makes Zach much more human, a more rounded character, and you see many, many sides to him. It also makes it a much more rounded experience for me to do."

A Chorus Line may depict the glamour of Broadway but it also shows just how hard life can be for a performer.

"You have these big dance calls. I've done auditions with something like 60 people in the room. You're teaching all of them the routine or multiple routines, and then you have to cut people. Then you go into the next routine and you cut some more. It's brutal in that respect. You do something and you stay on or get cut, and that's how the day progresses.

"What's so great about A Chorus Line is that it really shows the sacrifices people have to make in order just to get onto the line, into the audition, let alone get the job. Performers have to have this kind of resilience; you go for an audition and it's a 50/50 whether you're going to get it; and then, if you don't, you go on to the next, and then you go on to the next. It's a way of life that dancers and actors and singers get used to, but it's not nice and requires a lot of guts."

A Chorus Line also showcases the highs of showbusiness - those moments when the performers finally step out into the limelight.

"It's also about hope. These people striving for their dream because that is what they have given their life towards. It's about being a performer, and everybody has to go through hardships on the way to achieving their dreams. Most people have to work really hard and prove themselves."

Adam certainly knows the work involved. Having set his sights on a career on the stage from childhood, he studied at both Arts Educational School and Royal Ballet School before initially performing as a classical ballet dancer with Royal Ballet. He then joined Matthew Bourne's Adventures In Motion Pictures company, before taking on roles in musicals such as Singin' In The Rain, The Wizard Of Oz, Guys And Dolls and White Christmas. He's also directed productions of Les Liaisons Dangereuses, Candide and The Rake's Progress, and choreographed shows including On Your Toes, The Merry Widow and Carousel.

Now in his 50s, how has he made the transition from principal ballet dancer to West End performer and creator?

"I started out as a tap dancer and a singer, which helps. Between the ages of 11 and 16, I went to a theatre school which did everything, so I was very much an all-rounder. It was only when I got to the age of 16 that I decided to concentrate on ballet and joined the Royal Ballet. Then I left and joined Matthew's company for a few years, and then I thought 'I want to be doing what I set out to do.' I never started in the business to be a ballet dancer; I started dancing to be a theatre performer - I wanted to be Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly - so when the time felt right, I said to my agent 'Can we see if I can get some work in that field?'"

"Luckily people took a punt on me, but I probably didn't feel like a proper actor until a few years later when I did Guys And Dolls in the West End with Patrick Swayze, among other people. That was the time I thought 'I'm a bona fide actor' because I was doing a show that was just acting and singing and no dancing required. So it felt like I was proving myself as an actor for the first time.

"I've also worked as a choreographer and director, and I'm lucky because I've never stopped working. I really enjoy it. I love being a part of the whole scene, from whichever direction it comes."

And now Adam is looking forward to sharing that enjoyment of theatre with Hippodrome patrons when A Chorus Line visits the venue next month.

"I hope audiences will feel like they've gone through an emotional evening. It's an emotional show, but it's the most uplifting show as well, because the production is stunning - the numbers, the choreography, the singing, the acting, the band are brilliant. "I think with this production we've proved it's as good as the original. Now is the chance for it to be shown to a whole new generation, and that's exciting. It's an iconic musical very rarely done, and this production of it is the most exciting, vivid and emotional version that they will see."

A Chorus Line shows at Birmingham Hippodrome from Tuesday 10 to Saturday 14 September

Hamilton Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sat 31 August

Hamilton barely needs an introduction. The smash-hit musical celebrating one of America’s founding fathers was first performed nearly 10 years ago. Since then, it has become an international sensation, with its style, soundtrack and storytelling changing the landscape of musical theatre.

Lin-Manuel Miranda’s lyrics and music are nothing short of genius. Driving the story forward with barely a moment’s break, they still allow for changes of pace and intensity throughout the show - and where else can you see political debate via rap battle?! The soundtrack is well known to fans, and the cast members are pitch perfect, subtly making the touring version their own. They really do breathe new life into this musical phenomenon. Almost a decade after its first performance, Hamilton is still riding the wave of success - and for very good reason. Whether you’ve never seen the show before or you know it inside out, be in The Room Where It Happens... Read our five star review at whatsonlive.co.uk

101 Dalmatians The Musical

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 20 - Sat 24 August

If you’re dotty about dogs, then this is a show you’d be absolutely barking mad to miss.

Based on the same-named 1956 novel by Dodie Smith, 101 Dalmatians tells the story of delightful dog duo Pongo and Perdi, a loving couple whose life with their 15 puppies is pretty much perfect. Until, that is, the little ones are stolen to order for the ever-so-wicked Cruella De Vil, who wants to make herself a spotty coat out of their fur. Faye Tozer steps in for Kym Marsh - who’s away filming the next series of television’s Waterloo Road - as this new touring production makes a welcome return to the Midlands.

The School For Scandal

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, until Fri 6 September

When Sir Peter Teazle marries a young country girl, he assumes that her innocence and naivety will ensure she’s of little bother to him. But he’s reckoned without his new wife’s decision to take up with three of the most outrageous scandalmongers in town...

Sheridan’s 18th-century comedy here receives the RSC treatment, with the Company promising ‘an exuberant feast of big wigs and even bigger laughs’ in a show that they’ve ‘styled to the nines with period flair’. Read our five star review at whatsonlive.co.uk

FULL CIRCLE

Wolverhampton-born Simeon Beckett's CV includes Everybody's Talking About Jamie and Back To The Future. This summer he's back on home turf in the Midlands, performing in the ensemble and as George Eaker in multi-award-winning musical Hamilton at Birmingham Hippodrome (until Saturday 31 August). We caught up with him to find out more...

Where did you go to school, Simeon, and what did you get up to as a youngster?

I grew up in Wolverhampton and went to primary school in Ettingshall, and then to secondary school at Moseley Park. I used to play a lot of football and played for Sunday teams Bentley and Wallstones, so I'd train there once or twice a week and then we'd play matches on a Sunday. I also enjoyed going down to pitches at Goals in Bilston and playing there with friends.

And now you live in London?

I moved in 2013 to train at the Urdang Academy. I did a foundation course for a year and then a three-year dance & musical theatre course, before graduating in 2017.

Can you tell us about the audition process and how you found out that you'd been cast in Hamilton?

The auditions were a mixture of dance, singing, acting, and then performing all three back-to-back. The first time I actually auditioned for Hamilton was 2017, but in the past it's never worked out timing-wise with other jobs I've had. I found out I'd been cast this time when my agent called me. She started to play some Hamilton music down the phone and asked if I'd like a part in Hamilton, which was pretty cool! That was last year, and I then started rehearsals in late August, into September, before the tour started in November.

Do you have any favourite haunts in Wolverhampton and Birmingham?

A lot has changed since I moved to London - there's been so much redevelopment, and some places don't exist anymore. But one of my favourite things to do is get a haircut at my childhood barbers, Markies Barbers and Prestige Barbers. When you're on tour and working away, you have to try and compromise with those things, but now that I'm home, it's nice that I can have my hair cut by someone I trust and who I've gone to for many years. I also enjoy going to the dance studios that I've taught at before, with people who I used to train with when I first started. It's really nice to go back to those.

What does it mean to be performing at Birmingham Hippodrome?

It means a lot, mainly because it's my local venue and close to all my friends and family, but also because I performed in my first ever theatre show there. I did a show called Breakin' Convention with a dance company called Dance Nuvo, and it was my first time performing in a big theatre in front of hundreds of people. So it's a real full-circle moment for me now that I'm here with Hamilton, and it's so special to have those moments.

Do you have family and friends coming to see the show whilst you're here?

My mum came last week, and it was really nice to have her in the audience; she is so supportive of me. My sister also came to see it, and after the show she asked if it was actually me speaking, or if it's pre-recorded and we mimed, because she had never heard me do an American accent before. When I did it for her again, she was mesmerised by it; I found that really funny! A lot of my other friends and family have also come to see it, or will come to see it, so it's really nice to have that support while I'm here.

Tell us about your role in the show?

I'm part of the ensemble and I also play George Eaker, who has a duel with Alexander Hamilton's son, Philip, in act two. Hamilton is very much an ensemble show and is carried a lot by the ensemble, I would say. We're hardly ever off-stage. It's a very busy show for me; in fact, it's probably one of the busiest shows I've ever done - it's non-stop! It challenges me every day, which keeps it interesting and fun.

Why should Midlands audiences go to see Hamilton?

Mainly because it's a really fun show. It's one of the best shows out there, not even being biased! The choreography, the music, everything is just great, and I think the message resonates with a lot that's going on in the world right now. Hamilton is a show that I've always wanted to do, and like I said, I've been auditioning for it since 2017, so it's really nice to be able to say that I've done it now.

Hamilton continues its run at Birmingham Hippodrome until Saturday 31 August

Pretty Woman The Musical

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 20 - Sat 24 August

Based on the still-adored 1990 movie that turned Julia Roberts into a superstar, the musical stage version of Pretty Woman has become quite a phenomenon in its own right, with record-breaking runs on Broadway and in the West End.

Co-written by the film's director, the late Garry Marshall - best known as the man behind 1970s TV hits Happy Days, Laverne & Shirley and Mork & Mindy - the show comes complete with original music & lyrics by pop superstar Bryan Adams (and his long-term collaborator, Jim Vallance).

Two-time Tony Award winner Jerry Mitchell both choreographs and directs the production. Amber Davies, Oliver Savile, Ore Oduba and Natalie Paris take the lead roles.

The Cherry Orchard

Swan Theatre, Worcester, Wed 28 - Sat 31 August; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Tues 10 - Sat 14 September

Anton Chekhov's The Cherry Orchard is not only his final play but also arguably his greatest - although The Seagull, Three Sisters and Uncle Vanya certainly provide some stiff competition with regard to that particular accolade.

An extraordinary mixture of tragedy and comedy, the play is set in a fast-changing world during the early years of the 20th century and the dying days of the Russian aristocracy.

The story finds Madame Lubov - a landowner fallen on hard times - returning to the family estate (which includes an expansive and famous cherry orchard) just as it's about to go under the auctioneer's hammer...

The play is being presented by Here To There Productions, a Shropshire company dedicated to bringing 'challenging and entertaining' shows to rural theatres across the West Midlands.

Julius Caesar

Brueton Park, Solihull, Tues 13 August

When Julius Caesar is assassinated by a group of prominent senators, one of his staunchest supporters, Mark Antony, manages not only to turn the crowd against the conspirators but also to defeat them in battle...

But let's avoid getting too bogged down in the whys and wherefores of Shakespeare's extremely serious tale of conspiracy and bloody murder - given that it's here being presented by zany funsters Oddsocks! The ever-entertaining band of theatricals are promising their audiences thrills and spills aplenty, including the tearing of togas, the swishing of swords, some splendidly preposterous puppetry and the biggest battle scene ever created by five actors. In short, it's time to brace yourself for the kind of laughs you have no right to expect in a production of Julius Caesar...

The Merry Wives Of Windsor

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, until Sat 7 September

Mistresses Page and Ford believe it's high time the fat knight Sir John Falstaff was taught a lesson. After all, the big fella's been courting them both, claiming that each is his one and only true love and caring not a jot that they're both married! A tale of buckbaskets, frolicsome fairies and men dressed as women, this is Shakespeare at his comic best. Expect your sides to be as near to splitting as they're ever likely to be when engaging with the works of Stratford's most famous son.

First Date

Old Joint Stock Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 7 - Sun 25 August

This award-winning Broadway musical about the pitfalls of romantic fix-ups is here receiving its UK premiere.

When blind-date newbie Aaron is set up with serial dater Casey, a casual drink at a busy New York restaurant turns into an unexpectedly high-stakes dinner. With other patrons in the eatery transforming into supportive best friends, manipulative exes and protective parents, the unlucky-in-love dining companions find themselves teetering on the brink of a dating disaster... Michali Dante, Royaka, Lowri Hamer, Tom Kiteley and Joey Warne star.

The Two Gentlemen Of Verona

Holloway Garden Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, Thurs 22 - Sat 24 August

One of Shakespeare's very earliest comedies, The Two Gentlemen Of Verona is little known but lots of fun. The plot centres on male friendship and betrayal, as Proteus and Valentine, two lifelong friends, fall out over the Duke of Milan's daughter... This open-air production is created and performed by the RSC Next Generation Act young company, which features 24 people aged between 13 and 18 and drawn from across the country.

The Wizard Of Oz

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, until Sun 4 August

RuPaul's Drag Race UK winner The Vivienne stars as the Wicked Witch of the West in this classic story from the imagination of L Frank Baum.

A marvellous mix of magic, mayhem and munchkins, the terrific tale tells the story of Kansas resident Dorothy Gale and her unexpected trip over the rainbow to the colourful land of Oz.

Featuring the iconic original score from the Oscar-winning MGM film - including Follow The Yellow Brick Road, We're Off To See The Wizard and (of course) Over The Rainbow - this hit show visits the Midlands direct from the London Palladium and includes additional songs by Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice.

The Adventures Of Doctor Dolittle

Moseley Old Hall, Wolverhampton, Tues 13 August; Hartshill Park, Telford, Tues 20 August

Doctor Dolittle is a friend to all manner of furry, four-legged creatures. And what's more, he can even speak to them in their very own languages...

This latest stage adaptation of the ever-popular Hugh Lofting story is performed by Illyria, who have a long and impressive history of presenting highly engaging theatre 'under the stars'.

Pride And Prejudice

Tamworth Assembly Rooms, Mon 26 August

Wonderful comic characters abound in Jane Austen's famous romantic story. The foolish and marriage-obsessed Mrs Bennet is relentless in her pursuit of suitable men for her five daughters to marry, her increasingly desperate quest generating all manner of muddle and mayhem in the process... This much-loved and oft-performed story is here presented by the well-established Chapterhouse, a company with an admirable reputation when it comes to producing high-quality theatrical fare for performance in the great outdoors.

The Importance Of Being Earnest

Greyfriars, Worcester, Fri 16 August

Oscar Wilde's famous work is a rightly adored slice of farce that sits in the upper echelons of British comic theatre. The story revolves around the attempts of Jack to marry his true love, Gwendolen, in spite of the fact that Algernon is masquerading as Jack's wayward brother Ernest in order to see his exquisite ward, Cecily. Add the ingredient of the redoubtable Lady Bracknell and there's little wonder that disaster looms large on Jack's horizon... Presented by Tethered Wits.

Masters Of Deception

Lichfield Garrick, Sat 31 August

Lance Corporal Richard Jones has followed up 12 years of service in the British Army with a hugely successful career as a magician. The only prestidigitator ever to win Britain's Got Talent, Richard has also headlined a sell-out show in the London West End and will no doubt be packing out theatres across the country with this latest offering. He's joined for the occasion by fellow Britain's Got Talent contestants Matrixs Illusion, who reached the show's semi-final two years ago.

I Wish My Life Were Like A Musical

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Fri 30 August

With multiple five-star reviews to recommend it, this comedic musical revue has headed out on tour having previously enjoyed four Edinburgh Fringe seasons and two London runs. Promising to reveal everything you could ever want to know about musical theatre, the show lifts the lid on awful auditions, debilitating dance routines, mid-performance mishaps and backstage backstabbing - 'plus those magical moments that make it all worthwhile'...

Dial M For Mayhem

Malvern Theatres, Wed 28 - Sat 31 August

A shepherd and his TV-watching sheepdog, a twinkle-eyed AA man, a missing child's pet black rat and an ageing and flatulent soap star: all play their part in this brand-new farce from Middle Ground Theatre Company. Set in 1991, the show follows a group of travelling actors as they battle against the odds to present classic 1950s thriller Dial M For Murder to the remote communities of the Scottish Highlands and Islands.

As You Like It

Biddulph Grange Gardens, Staffs, Fri 23 August; The Dorothy Clive Garden, Market Drayton, North Shropshire, Sat 24 August; Whittington Castle, Shropshire, Sun 25 August

Banished by her usurping uncle to the Forest of Arden and revelling in the naturalness of her surroundings, Rosalind - accompanied by cousin Celia and Touchstone the fool - finds a happiness she didn't know existed... Expect 'live music, bold characters, audience interaction and plenty of laughs' in Folksy Theatre's new production of Shakespeare's timeless and highly likable comedy. The company is also presenting outdoor performances of Angelica Sprocket's Pockets at Midlands venues this month (see below).

The Railway Children

Tewkesbury Abbey, Fri 9 August; Hill Close Gardens, Warwick, Sat 10 August; Tamworth Castle, Sun 18 August

Edith Nesbitt's famous tale, which remains best known from the 1971 film version, tells the gentle story of an Edwardian family whose life is unexpectedly turned upside-down.

Days stretch endlessly for Bobbie, Peter and Phyllis in their new home of Three Chimneys, a house near a railway in a Yorkshire village. Mysteriously separated from their father, the children set about the business of carving out a new way of living for themselves, passing their time watching trains on the nearby line, waving to the passengers and enjoying the company of Albert Perks, the station porter. They also get to know an old gentleman who regularly takes the 9.15 train; a man who, if the youngsters did but know it, is set to have a remarkable impact on their future happiness...

The show is presented by Tethered Wits.

Peter Pan

Shrewsbury Castle, Thurs 15 August; Dudmaston Hall, Bridgnorth, Shropshire, Sun 18 August

Second star to the right and straight on till morning - that's the way to Neverland... This new theatrical production offers young audiences the chance to fly away with the boy who wouldn't grow up to a magical island filled with adventure...

An Immersion Theatre production, the show comes complete with 'catchy music, heaps of audience interaction, and a laugh-a-minute script'.

The Merry Wives Of Windsor

Shrewsbury Castle, Thurs 8 August

The critically acclaimed Pantaloons bring silly slapstick, abundant anachronisms and memorable music to the picnic table as they put their own innovative and interactive spin on this classic comedy from the quill of the Bard. The production is being presented as part of Shrewsbury Castle's open-air theatre season.

Jeeves And Wooster

Billesley Manor, Stratford-upon-Avon, Tues 6 August; Greyfriars, Worcester, Thurs 8 August; Tewkesbury Abbey, Fri 9 August; Hill Close Gardens, Warwick, Sat 10 August; Tamworth Castle, Sun 18 August

The delightful world of PG Wodehouse is here brought to the stage in Stiff Upper Lip, Jeeves. Featuring ill-fated romances, comical escapades and an engaging cast of quirky characters, the production is presented by Tethered Wits, whose other outdoor summer shows, The Railway Children and The Importance Of Being Earnest, are previewed elsewhere in this section.

Live jazz music, performed by an ensemble of talented actor-musicians, further adds to the show's appeal...

Angelica Sprocket's Pockets

Brueton Park, Solihull, Sat 10 August; The Dorothy Clive Garden, Market Drayton, Sat 17 August

Angelica Sprocket's overcoat has pockets galore, and here's your chance to find out exactly what's in them...

A combination of live music, puppetry, audience interaction and 'madness' is Folksy Theatre's recipe for success as they present Quentin Blake's classic children's tale.

MAKING AN ENTRANCE

Tamara Harvey, the co-artistic director of the Royal Shakespeare Company, talks about leadership, collaboration, and directing a new production of Pericles...

Tamara Harvey and Daniel Evans became co-artistic directors of the Royal Shakespeare Company in 2023. The pair's first programmed season is now in full swing, with Tamara directing a new production of Pericles. What's On chats to her about the play's appeal, and the joys and challenges of her new shared role...

You're co-artistic director with Daniel Evans - what are the benefits and the challenges of collaboration?

The wonderful thing is, I feel that I discover a new benefit every day. We're in a new phase of our co-artistic directorship, because it's the first time that one of us has been in rehearsals. Having been an artistic director on my own at Theatre Clwyd, I know the enormous challenge, both for me and the organisation, when I go into rehearsals. Having Daniel able to hold some of that, and therefore being able to be more focused in the rehearsal room than I think I've been since 2015, when I took the post at Clwyd, is just extraordinary.

It's a cliché to say: leadership can be lonely - and that's just not true when there are two of you. The challenges are as they would be in any new partnership - just figuring out how the other person works, how they make decisions. Daniel and I have known each other for years and have worked together in different ways, but this is the first time we've done this job together. Within each of those challenges there's always something new to be discovered.

What were the driving forces for you as you put together your first season of shows at the RSC?

We really wanted to make sure that we were offering a broad range of work - not just comedy and tragedy, but the political or the personal - and that we're bringing the most exciting artists to our stages, and being led by them in terms of the stories that they felt passionate about telling.

One of the things that's really important to us is that we are telling stories that have a resonance and vitality to them, in this moment, in the world. Sometimes that's really obvious - Kyoto clearly engages in a very immediate way with the climate emergency, which is the biggest crisis of our times - and sometimes it's more subtle, or more nuanced, or more joyful. In The Merry Wives Of Windsor, Blanche McIntyre, the director, has done a beautiful job in bringing the play into this moment and making it feel like it's absolutely a story of our times.

The other thing that we really wanted to do was make sure that we were reaching across borders. I think we both feel very acutely that in this moment in the world, when nations are in some ways becoming more and more isolationist, the arts - and theatre in particular - has a duty to reach across borders and engage with international artists and international audiences.

Can you provide a brief outline of the plot of Pericles?

It's the story of a young man who is trying to figure out who he is in the world, and what kind of leader he wants to be. He gets buffeted by the Fates - often by storms at sea - so he encounters all these obstacles, and has to keep getting up again, and keep trying to find his way in the world.

It also becomes the story of a young woman who has to do the same - has to figure out who she is, and how to carve her own path, and equally gets buffeted by the Fates and met with all of these horrific challenges, and somehow similarly finds a way to keep moving forward.

What in particular drew you to the play?

I think that there is something really important now about this story of endurance, and tenacity, and survival against the odds. I'm interested in a story where the man in the end falls down, and the woman keeps going - it's her who reaches a hand and pulls him up. I think in 2024 there is something really powerful about a story that has our protagonist encounter many different forms of leadership, and different types of leaders. I love Shakespeare's late plays because I think there's a kind of confidence that playwrights have late in their careers. You feel it in other playwrights as well, when they've had their big hits, and they kind of stop trying to please people - there's a kind of 'devil may care' in the writing.

In this post-pandemic world, the theme of loss and reunion, I think, will always have a potency for those of us who've lived through lockdown.

Why do you think Pericles is so rarely performed?

It's funny because these things go in waves - actually Pericles has been performed more in the 21st century, I believe, than it was in the 200 years preceding it, so it might be getting a bit of a revival.

I think I'd be lying if I said I knew! I'm in week four of rehearsals, so I'm in the heat of it, thinking 'Why isn't this done more often? This is great!'

What's most surprised you during your relatively short time in-post at the RSC?

So many things! I think that one of the things that I hoped - and didn't know for certain - is how open and excited the company, the staff, the freelancers, and the audiences are to the idea of a new chapter, and to the notion of transformation and evolution.

There's something in the very roots of the company that is radical. Back in the 1870s, when the Flower family said 'We should have a theatre in Stratford-upon-Avon,' that was a deeply radical idea...

There is, absolutely, in the DNA of the company, a willingness to take chances, and to be radical, and to try new things.

How does the collaboration process with Daniel work on a practical level?

I've got two small children, a six-year-old and an eight-year-old, and I think it is still challenging to be a parent or a carer, to have caring responsibilities in the performing arts. Actually, I think it's challenging to do it in any industry.

That's a really important part of the reason that I wanted to do this job with Daniel - I know he also passionately believes in the importance of making it possible for people to have children and work in the arts. Doing it with him makes it possible for me.

It's a curious one for me, because I'm quite a private person... Unless we keep talking about it and keep finding ways to navigate these challenges, we'll continue to lose brilliant people from the profession and have a less rich, less complex variety of voices telling the stories on our stages.

What is the most significant change you and Daniel have so far made?

I don't know if it's the most significant, but the simple fact that Greg Doran [the RSC's former artistic director] had this ambition to do Shakespeare's canon across 10 years. We are approaching the programme from a different angle, by saying we're going to be artist-led and choose which stories we tell depending on the stories that artists are most passionate about. That simple difference actually has a sizable effect on what plays we might do, and what stories we might tell.

How would you hope the RSC will look in, say, five years' time?

I hope it will be a space anyone and everyone can walk into, and that every show - and this is no small ambition - feels like a 'must see'.

It Ends With Us CERT tbc

Starring Blake Lively, Justin Baldoni, Jenny Slate, Hasan Minhaj, Amy Morton, Brandon Sklenar Directed by Justin Baldoni

When flower-shop owner Lily Bloom finds romance with the assertive Dr Ryle Kincaid, life definitely takes a turn for the better. But then her first love reappears on the scene, and events leave Lily feeling less than certain that the brilliant neurosurgeon is the right man for her after all...

Published eight years ago, Colleen Hoover's novel of the same name became a cultural phenomenon in 2022 thanks to TikTok and social-media influencers, and it's no surprise that the book's recent success has been followed by this big-screen adaptation. The film has faced its fair share of criticism, though, with fans claiming its lead actors are too old to play the characters depicted in the novel. Author Hoover responded by saying she'd made a wrong choice about their ages when writing the book. Speaking to Today, she said: "I didn't know that neurosurgeons went to school for 50 years! There's not a twentysomething neurosurgeon. As I started making this movie, I'm like 'We need to age them out because I messed up.' So that's my fault."

Released Fri 9 August

Alien: Romulus CERT tbc

Starring Isabela Meced, Cailee Spaeny, Archie Renaux, David Jonsson, Aileen Wu, Spike Fearn Directed by Fede Alvarez

While scavenging the deep ends of a derelict space station, a group of young space colonisers come face to face with the most terrifying life form in the universe...

The Alien franchise just keeps on giving, a full 45 years after the first film was released to great critical acclaim.

With the exception of James Cameron's 1986 follow-up movie, Aliens, the sequels to and spin-offs from Ridley Scott's 1979 original have been largely disappointing.

With that in mind, it's to be hoped that this latest release emphatically bucks that trend and reminds us all of why the original sci-fi/horror-thriller has remained so universally admired.

Released Fri 16 August

Borderlands CERT 12a (102 mins)

Starring Cate Blanchett, Ariana Greenblatt, Kevin Hart, Gina Gershon, Haley Bennett, Jamie Lee Curtis Directed by Eli Roth

The latest film to be inspired by a videogame, Borderlands finds two-time Oscar winner Kate Blanchett starring as Lilith, an infamous bounty hunter fighting alien species and dangerous bandits...

"There's an absolute sense of mayhem and total insanity and fun that's in the game that is infused in every frame of the film," Director Eli Roth told Entertainment Weekly. "It's got science-fiction, it's got creatures, it's got a bit of Star Wars, it's got a bit of Mad Max, it's got a bit of Barbarella - all these sci-fi influences that I love and I got to throw in one insane blender."

Released Fri 9 August

Blink Twice CERT tbc (102 mins)

Starring Channing Tatum, Naomi Ackie, Christian Slater, Simon Red, Adria Arjona, Kyle MacLachlan Directed by Zoë Kravitz

When tech billionaire Slater King meets cocktail waitress Frida at his fundraising gala, sparks fly, so he invites her to join him and his friends on a dream vacation on his private island.

Wild nights and sun-soaked days ensue, but then strange things start to happen, leaving Frida seriously questioning her grip on reality...

Billed as a psychological black comedy-thriller, Blink Twice marks the directorial debut of Zoë Kravitz, who played Catwoman in DC's The Batman two years ago.

Released Fri 23 August

The Crow CERT tbc (111 mins)

Starring Bill Skarsgård, FKA Twigs, Danny Huston, Laura Birn, Jordan Bolger, Karel Dobry Directed by Rupert Sanders

The original film of The Crow, which marks its 30th anniversary this year, was overshadowed by the death of its star, Brandon Lee - the son of legendary martial-arts icon Bruce Lee - who was fatally wounded on set just three days before he was due to finish shooting.

Hailed by many as a masterpiece, the cult classic tells the revenge-fantasy story of a young musician who, after being brutally murdered alongside his beloved fiancée, is brought back to life by a mysterious crow... Bill Skarsgård takes top billing for this eagerly anticipated movie, which its marketing team say is less a remake of the 1994 film, more a second adaptation of James O'Barr's original 1989 graphic novel.

FOXY LADY

Jenny Ryan, aka The Vixen, gets ready to tour the UK with new cabaret show Out Of The Box

For millions of viewers, Jenny Ryan is best known as The Vixen in ITV's The Chase, a professional quizzer who has shattered the hopes of countless contestants. But there's much more to this trivia queen than first meets the eye, as she reveals in her autobiographical cabaret show, Out Of The Box, which kicks off its UK tour in Lichfield next month. What's On caught up with Jenny to find out more...

What inspired you to create a cabaret show?

Out Of The Box sprang out of my love of music and the fact that, after my stint on The X Factor: Celebrity, people were kind enough to say they wanted to hear more of my voice. The other thing I often get asked about is how I got into my very unusual career. So I thought, why not tell my story through the medium of songs. I hope it will inspire people. I grew up in a single-parent working-class home in Bolton, and becoming a professional quizzer isn't something a careers advisor ever told me was possible.

How did you go about choosing the songs?

The show started with the music. I sat down with my friend and musical director, Eoin Mallon, and we talked about the songs I enjoy singing, that bring me joy. They included some that I performed on The X Factor, some from musical theatre roles I've always wanted to play, and others that reflect moments in my life. Once we put them all together, we realised they told a story and could be linked to different points in my journey. They really reflect the different sides to me, and there are plenty of surprises as well!

You premiered the show at the Edinburgh Fringe last summer. How was that experience?

Edinburgh was fantastic. I tend to go every year - a lot of my friends perform there, as does my partner, so I knew what a risk we were taking. But honestly, I was blown away by the response. We sold out the run and people came from all over to see it. Every night, when I looked out to a full house, I was just astonished that, of all the shows at the festival, people had chosen to come and spend an evening with me.

At the end of the show you take questions from the audience. Do any particular ones stand out?

There are certain evergreen questions that seem to come up every time, such as 'What's Bradley Walsh really like?' But there's always something that knocks me sideways. One of my favourites was someone who asked about my favourite musicals, and which roles I'd like to play. I don't think they were expecting me to answer King George in Hamilton!

Is singing something you've always enjoyed?

It's always brought me personal joy, singing into my hairbrush and that kind of thing, but I didn't realise until quite late on that I had a good voice. I was always in the back row of the choir and never got cast in the main roles in school productions. I certainly never thought I'd be someone who ended up singing on Saturday night TV and performing my own show! It's been a real revelation.

Do you ever get nervous - for example, when you did The X Factor?

Stage fright seems to happen about an hour before the performance, but then I can put it in a box. For me, the nerves completely subside once I step out there. There's something quite magical about being in that spotlight - it's like a superpower. When I performed at Simon Cowell's house in Malibu in front of dozens of industry professionals, it was an unreal experience, which meant I could almost disassociate and imagine I was in some kind of video game.

Did you have that confidence as a kid?

I did when I knew it was something that played to my strengths. At school I was always the one who was two books ahead of everyone else and had completed her homework first. But in other aspects of my life, I had real imposter syndrome. I thought my role wasn't to be front and centre, and I've had to learn to shut up that voice of doubt. It's okay to be a dork and a pop star. I contain multitudes.

How did you get into quizzing?

University Challenge was my first experience of doing a TV quiz, and during filming I just felt completely at ease. Walking away from that experience, I thought about my grandad, who used to look after me and introduced me to his favourite shows, like Fifteen To One. I realised that I'd inherited his love of both television and quizzing. So I then started applying to go on other quiz shows and eventually got to the point where I became a professional. I was lucky that there's been a real boom in the genre, with shows like Eggheads and The Chase.

Your alter ego on The Chase is The Vixen. Do you see her as a character you play or an extension of yourself?

She's definitely a character. The original vision was for the professionals to be like pantomime villains, so they decided that mine was going to be crafty, smart and a bit fierce - hence, The Vixen. But I think they realised people often like to root for the chasers, so she's mellowed a bit over the years. The costume is very much a shield that lets me behave with a bit more confidence and sass than I do in my everyday life. People often meet me and say 'You're actually really nice!'

How do you relax away from stage and screen?

It's actually quite hard to have hobbies that don't feed into my quizzing. I watch a lot of theatre, TV and films, but those things all connect to my work! Even when I'm on the tube or the bus, I'm looking at the adverts and taking in the information - there's learning everywhere. I think that's why I'm particularly strong on pop culture, because I consume so much of it. I certainly prefer that to questions about maths, which send me into a panic.

Are you excited to be hitting the road with Out Of The Box?

Very excited. After Edinburgh a lot of people asked when we would be taking it round the UK, so hopefully they'll come and see me. We've tried to cover as much of the country as we can, and I'm really excited to visit some familiar places alongside some I've never been to before. It's going to be a lot of fun. Jamie Jones was my dame in panto last year and lives in Lichfield. He even works at the Garrick Theatre, so I'm really excited to see Jamie again. I know he's a local theatre legend.

Jenny Ryan kicks off her Out Of The Box tour at Lichfield Garrick Theatre on Wednesday 11 September. She then returns to the region to play Stourbridge Town Hall on Thursday 3 October and Stafford Gatehouse on Sunday 10 November

A WORLD OF GLASS

The International Festival of Glass returns to the historic Stourbridge Glass Quarter this month (Friday 23 - Monday 26 August). Marking its 20th anniversary, the event this year takes the theme Past, Present, Future, with its programme recalling highlights from previous editions of the festival and also including dynamic new attractions and exhibitions. Here the Festival team share just a small sample of what's on offer...

Fun for all the family

A visit to the festival is a great way to ignite the interest of the next generation of glass enthusiasts! Once again we will be featuring lots of family-friendly fun at the event, including a glass doodle competition and a family glass-fusing workshop. Not all our activities are glass-focused - visitors can also take part in papermaking, spinning-wheel making and stick frame weaving.

Netflix's Blown Away stars

The Festival is bringing together glass artists from around the world, including some of the glassmaking stars of Netflix hit Blown Away. Stourbridge is the creative home of both Elliot Walker and Maddy Hughes, who will be showing off the skills that made them so popular on the show.

The UK's largest exhibition of contemporary glass

The British Glass Biennale is the flagship exhibition of the International Festival of Glass, showcasing the world-class glass which is being made in the UK and featuring work by 121 selected artists. The return of the People's Prize Award allows families to get involved by voting for their favourite piece, while the Young Collectors' Award will see the winning child receive a piece of contemporary glass to start their very own collection.

Juggling Glass with PanGottic

PanGottic have been a Festival favourite since their first event in 2019, and each display wows the crowds. Routinely pushing the boundaries of street circus performance, they will again be including some sure-to-be-breathtaking glass juggling! We are excited to experience what they bring to this year's Festival.

Arabian Tent & Bar

Alongside celebrating all things glass, the Festival has always been about bringing people together. This year we will be reviving the hugely popular Arabian Tent & Bar, to provide a social hub for visitors. Relax and enjoy a local brew, reminisce over festivals past, and share great experiences from the 2024 edition of the event.

Ruskin's Seven Lamps

Walk The Plank, experts in outdoor celebration, thrilled us all with the first huge Festival finale in 2004, and we are delighted to welcome them back for an evening of music, fire and immersive spectacle. The centrepiece will be a huge fire sculpture by artist Felix Rowberry, with the audience committing their hopes and wishes for the next 20 years to the fire in a ritual act witnessed by all.

Beyond Van Gogh NEC, Birmingham, Thurs 1 August - Sun 1 September

A multimedia touring show celebrating Vincent van Gogh's life and work, Beyond Van Gogh: The Immersive Experience combines more than 300 of the artist's paintings with cutting-edge technology and a specially curated classical music soundtrack. The 'stunning sensory extravaganza' has so far been viewed by more than five million people across the world...

A Spirit Inside

Compton Verney, Warwickshire, until Sun 1 September

With its themes ranging from mythology and internal contemplation to external and political expression, A Spirit Inside comprises a selection of works produced by women and non-binary artists across a period of 100-plus years. The featured pieces have been drawn from the Women's Art Collection - Europe's biggest collection of work by female artists - and The Ingram Collection, one of the UK's best collections of modern and contemporary British art. Artists whose work is featured in the show include Leonora Carrington, Winifred Nicholson, Bridget Riley, Man Fung Yi and Perminder Kaur,

Shrewsbury Arts Trail

In and around Shrewsbury town centre, until Sat 31 August

Shrewsbury Arts Trail continues to show throughout this month, taking the theme of 'Time' and including work by, among others, Salvador Dali, David Hockney, Damien Hirst and Tracey Emin. Workshops, an open exhibition and a brand-new Infinity Cube immersive experience also feature - as does an all-British female sculpture trail, showcasing works by Halima Cassell, Alice Irwin and Almuth Tebbenhoff.

The Hidden Lives Of Plants: Botanical Illustrations From The V&A

Barber Institute, University of Birmingham, until Sun 10 November

Given that the Barber has only recently reopened following nine months of building improvement work, and that it closes again in early 2025, when the second phase of its redevelopment begins, there really is no better time than right now to discover the venue's many delights. Among them, until late autumn, is The Hidden Lives Of Plants, a selection of botanical imagery from London's Victoria & Albert Museum. The featured works have been drawn from the V&A's collection of almost 1,000 botanical illustrations, ranging from scientific diagrams documenting medicinal plants to merchandising images that adorn seed packets.

Acts Of Creation: On Art And Motherhood

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, until Sun 29 September

A Hayward Gallery Touring exhibition that 'plunges into the joys and heartaches, mess, myths and mishaps of motherhood', Act Of Creation features more than 100 artworks - 'from the feminist avant-garde to the present day'. The exhibition explores the lived experience of being a mum, offering a 'complex account' that engages with contemporary concerns about gender, caregiving and reproductive rights.

Titanic Exhibition NEC, Birmingham, until Sun 25 August

Visitors to this fascinating exhibition will find themselves coming face to face with objects and artefacts from one of the most famous and tragic events in 20th-century British history.

The Titanic was a passenger liner that sank in the North Atlantic Ocean on 15

April 1912 during its maiden voyage. Using remarkable footage of the wreckage, the exhibition offers a rare chance to discover more about the crew, engineers and passengers who set sail on what was supposedly an ‘unsinkable’ ship.

Victorian Radicals

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Thurs 31 October

Birmingham’s impressive collection of Pre-Raphaelite art is here displayed in the city for the first time in more than five years.

Taking the subtitle ‘From The Pre-Raphaelites To The Arts & Crafts Movement’, Victorian Radicals features vibrant paintings and exquisite drawings presented alongside jewellery, glass, textiles and metalwork. The show provides visitors with the chance to discover the story of the Pre-Raphaelites - Britain’s first modern art movement - and learn about their influence on artists and makers well into the 20th century.

Joy... Inspired By Nature

Herbert Art Gallery & Museum, Coventry, until Sun 22 September

Herbert Art Gallery & Museum’s free-to-enjoy summer exhibition comes complete with giant flowers, bursts of rainbow colours, and sounds and smells that awaken inner tranquillity.

Joy... Inspired By Nature sees acclaimed artists Nicola Richardson and Marianne Taviner create ‘an eye-popping wonderland that playfully reconnects us to nature’.

The exhibition features two special commissions: a scentscape by Gemma Costin and a soundscape by Ashley James Brown. Local artist Abeda Begum joins the team in crafting the final installation.

Dion Kitson: Rue Britannia

Ikon Gallery, Birmingham, until Sun 8 September

A major solo exhibition, Dion Kitson’s Rue Britannia sees the artist remodelling everyday objects to isolate and elevate ubiquitously ‘ordinary’ sights, such as a burst football or discarded plastic bottle.

The exhibition also includes Council House Of Kitson - a new installation featuring a pebble-dashed façade and footage documenting Dion’s father.

THE DOLLY SHOW

A 'rollicking and joyous' new stage show featuring the music of Dolly Parton is currently touring the UK. Here You Come Again: The Dolly Parton Musical focuses on the character of Kevin, a diehard Dolly fan who finds much-needed solace in his own imagined version of the legendary country singer. What's On recently caught up with Steven Webb, who plays Kevin, to find out more...

What can audiences expect when they come to see the show, Steven?

Apart from the obvious thing of hearing all of Dolly Parton's biggest hits and your favourite Dolly Parton songs, there's a bucketload of stage magic and illusion. But I think the unexpected thing is that audiences can really relate to it. Even though it's a singular story about a singular person, every single person went through some of the same things during lockdown. There are a lot of nuances and little reminders that will take audiences back to that time. In my experience, every time I speak to people about it, it's like we've compartmentalised it. It's almost like it didn't happen, so it's cathartic and therapeutic going back to that time. But it isn't all doom and gloom; it's very light and it's about a journey and navigating through that.

Who is Kevin and what's his role in the story?

He describes himself as a has-been-who-never-was comedian. So he's an aspiring comedian and he works at a comedy club, but he's one of those people who are naturally hilarious when he's not trying to be. Then, when he tries to make you laugh, it's met with silence, and I think that there's something so endearing about people like that. He wants to be funny, but when he tries, he's not funny at all. He works at a comedy club in London, and his narcissistic boyfriend has just broken up with him. They were isolating together, and now he has to be sequestered to his parents' attic back in Halifax, where he keeps all his childhood memorabilia. It used to be his den, and it's especially full of his old Dolly Parton memorabilia, being that he's a superfan.

How does Dolly herself come into the picture?

Kevin starts to self-medicate and is having a bit of a rough time. He loses his job, he's lost his relationship, and he's surrounded by all these childish things. He's a bit down and out, and feels like he has nothing. Then, through necessity and magic and music, he puts on Dolly's Here You Come Again album. She materialises and almost stages an intervention to help him through this time, using tough love. She doesn't solve anything for him, she just gives him pointers. There's a line in one of her songs, Better Get To Living, which is about how all healing has to start with you. The show is about that journey of self-recovery and self-discovery and listening to that inner, positive voice.

Does Kevin's narrative mirror your own in any way?

Hugely - to the point where, when I first read the script, I nearly had to lawyer-up because I felt like I'd been surveilled throughout the pandemic! I'm four years sober now, and I got sober in April 2020, a few weeks into lockdown. Like a lot of people, I was self-medicating because we were forced to sit with ourselves and look at ourselves. What is really beautiful is that our director, Gabriel [Barre], allowed me to bring a lot of my own experiences to the character and the show, so we've sort of worked with my personal journey and put quite a lot of that in there. It's incredibly therapeutic and cathartic for me to go back to that time, as I think it will be for the audience

Are you a Dolly Parton fan?

Again, hugely! And I have a very specific parallel with this character. Back in 2002, I think it was, I was going through a rough time with a boyfriend. Dolly was doing a one-night show at the Hammersmith Apollo in London, and I just got myself a ticket and went on my own. It was an unbelievable experience because you had so many different groups and types of people in the audience. You had drag queens, housewives, and just this massive mix of people. But what struck me most was seeing how many other people were there alone. You don't often get that at concerts, and it was the most incredible experience. We all obviously went there for a reason, and we got what we came for because there was something magical about Dolly's message and her strength and her power. It truly helped me, and that's what I mean about when I read the script for Here You Come Again; it felt a bit like reading my own Truman Show.

Why do you think Dolly is such an icon for the LGBTQ community?

I think it's because she's always refused to be confined to the parameters presented to her. Even some of her earlier songs, like Dumb Blonde and Just Because I'm A Woman, are about taking a swipe at the gender divide and the inequalities of the world. She has this unflinching, non-conformist attitude, and she's managed to maintain that message. For the queer community, we see someone who demands respect, ignores gender expectations and promotes love and tolerance whilst remaining true to, and promoting, her faith. She's proof that kindness is key. She's such a role model in that way.

And why do you think she's so widely adored?

Because she's maintained consistency. She's never bowed down. She makes her own way of doing things because, as I said, she never follows the rules, yet she manages never to ps anyone off. Also, she doesn't allow anyone to get in there first with any possible negatives. She's always the first to get in there herself, so for any small thing that anyone may not like about Dolly Parton, they can't bring it up because she's already covered it. She's already pointed it out herself. She's just this almost perfect human being, and she's an inspiration in the way she carries herself and how she lives her life.

Do you have a favourite song in the show?

It's probably a tie. Two Doors Down is one of my favourite Dolly Parton songs of all time. In the show it's just a joyous moment; a kind of imaginary party in Kevin's head, where even Boris Johnson makes an appearance because, as we all know, he loves a party during lockdown! But I think my absolute favourite would be Why'd You Come In Here Lookin' Like That, because it's a remixed techno clubby version. I don't want to give anything away, but you'll be able to see me like you've never seen me before. Let's just say that I'm currently trying to find a way to balance in six-inch heels!

If you got to meet Dolly, what's the one thing you'd want to ask her?

I don't think I'd ask her anything. I would just thank her for what she's given to the world and continues to give to the world.

You spent a long time appearing in The Book Of Mormon. So what's it like now, finding yourself in a brand-new musical?

It's wonderful, and it's such a different experience. When I joined The Book Of Mormon, which I ended up being in for nearly seven years, it was three years into its run, so it was already the hot ticket in town. I knew what I was going into, and I came in halfway through a contract, so I rehearsed on my own. I learned the entire show in 12 days on my own, and I didn't get to actually do it with the cast until the first day I was on. That process was terrifying and quite isolating. But with this, we're starting from the ground up, being in a room where, even though the show has been done before in the States, not everything is set in stone. It's been anglicised, and it's organically taking on a new shape. It's the most collaborative room I've ever been in, and everyone is allowed input. It's not just 'This is what you do' or 'This is where you stand' because it's tried and tested. It's a fully collaborative effort. Watching Tricia Paoluccio embody and transform into Dolly every day is uncanny. You feel the warmth of Dolly every single day. It's incredibly magical.

What do you see as the key message of Here You Come Again?

Apart from what I said earlier, about how all healing has to start with you, as Dolly sings in those lyrics, I think it's about finding the volume control on your inner voices. We all have a positive and a negative voice inside us, and as adults I think our default setting is to have the negative voice louder than the positive. So it's about finding those dials and levelling them, if not allowing the positive voice to become louder.

COOKING WITH ROSEMARY

Rosemary Shrager never meant to become a chef - or a bestselling author, come to that. The haute cuisine teacher on Ladette To Lady, and judge of Soapstar Superstar, originally had her sights set on becoming an interior designer - a career in line with one of her more-recent side ventures as a kitchen planner.

A hankering to work with food whilst at art school led Rosemary to seek a role in the kitchen, and she soon found herself working with Jean Christophe-Novelli and Pierre Koffman. Rosemary then set about establishing her career as a chef - firstly in a freelance role and then as a head chef at Moyns Park, the home of the Mountbatten family.

Television came next, including appearances on reality TV shows I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out Of Here!, The Real Marigold Hotel, and Let's Dance For Comic Relief. When lockdown hit, Rosemary took to running cook-alongs and master classes via Zoom. At the same time she decided to dip her toes into writing fiction - a career move which has most definitely paid off. This month, her fans can catch her at Shrewsbury Flower Show, where she'll be showcasing her culinary skills on both days of the event. We recently fired over some questions for her to answer...

What's your earliest food memory, Rosemary...

One of my earliest is my mother carving into a whole ham! It was delicious, and a lovely experience with her. A lovely homebaked ham.

Is there a particular person who has influenced you most as a chef?

Pierre Koffman. Without a doubt. He had faith in me and always was my food hero - and still is.

Who would you relish the opportunity to cook for?

I always love cooking for my family the most. We rarely see each other because of work commitments, but they are my favourite people to cook for. Family, and friends too.

Is there a current chef you particularly admire?

Elliot Grover from 45 Park Lane. There are also wonderful new chefs coming up through the ranks and making a statement - like Ellis Barry, who is based in Anglesey.

What's your favourite meal to prepare?

I love making pies!

...And for someone else to cook for you?

I always love it when someone makes me cucumber sandwiches! There's nothing like another person making me cucumber sandwiches, especially with some egg thrown in for good measure!

Did your appearances in reality shows I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out Of Here! and The Real Marigold Hotel change your approach as a chef in any way?

It showed and educated me more with spices and flavours when I travelled for Real Marigold.

And how did the experience change you on a personal level?

It educated me about new people and new cultures. Wherever we travelled, everyone was just happy to share their food. It was such a sharing situation.

You've made quite a name for yourself away from the kitchen, writing very well-received whodunnits. Is this a genre that's particularly interested you, or was there something else behind your decision to follow in the footsteps of other literary sleuths?

The idea of writing Cosy Crime was put to me during Covid and I fell in love with it! The characters are based on people I've met, and I'm obviously Prudence in real life!

Kitchen design also features in your extensive portfolio. What culinary accessory could you not do without?

The bin under my chopping board! It's a pull-out and is so useful! I also have an integrated vacuum packer, which I love!

And which three ingredients should everyone always have in their store cupboard?

Olive oil, garlic, salt and pepper. That's four!

Favourite comfort food?

Peanut butter - always crunchy! It's so tasty and satisfying, and it's lovely with an apple!

Finally, what are you planning to cook up at Shrewsbury Flower Show?

Cheat's crispy duck and smoked haddock with a poached egg.

Shrewsbury Flower Show The Quarry Park, Shrewsbury, Fri 9 & Sat 10 August

As one of the UK's premier events of its kind, Shrewsbury Flower Show attracts top exhibitors from all over the country. As well as its abundance of glorious blooms, the show also features talks, demonstrations, performances and plenty more besides. Celebrity foodies are always on hand to whet visitors' appetites, while gardening experts offer up green-fingered hints and tips. This year's line-up includes horticulturist and ITV regular Camilla Bassett-Smith, BBC

Two Gardeners' World presenter Sue Kent, chef and TV presenter Rosemary Shrager, and the owner of mobile kitchen The Street Diner, Jon Labella. The show also includes craft and food stalls selling artisan products, and a programme of arena entertainment featuring Chasing Mumford (Friday evening) and Take That Live - Tribute (Saturday evening). A spectacular fireworks display rounds off proceedings on both evenings of the event.

Get The Picture: Summer Of Design

British Motor Museum, Gaydon, until Mon 2 September

Visitors to the British Motor Museum can dive into the world of car design this month, thanks to a range of fun family activities. Attractions include resident car designers Dottie & Dougie hosting daily family tours. There's also the Car Details Garage, offering the 'creatively inclined' the chance to design their very own vehicle. Visitors can then put what they've learned to the test via a special family trail, sketching different design features based on the cars around the museum.

Game On! The Science Of Sport

Thinktank Birmingham Science Museum, weekdays until Fri 30 August

Packed full of interactive demonstrations, this 25-minute live show - taking place outdoors in Thinktank's Science Garden - not only illustrates the ways in which athletes use Newton's three laws of motion but also explores how the laws can apply to people's everyday lives.

The Battle Of Evesham

Crown Meadow, Evesham, Sat 3 & Sun 4 August

Step back in time to the 13th century as the Battle of Evesham is re-enacted! Boasting a medieval festival and camp, the free-to-attend event sees hundreds of re-enactors fighting 'to the death' on both days. A Battle of Evesham 'grand parade' - featuring mounted knights in full armour - will wind its way through the town on the Saturday morning. Falconry and equestrian displays, treasure trails and children's activities also feature.

We're Going On A Bear Hunt Birmingham

across Birmingham city centre, until Fri 6 September

Wild In Art's latest sculpture trail, featuring 10 beautifully designed and decorated bears, is now available to view in central, er, Birmingham...

Presented in support of Birmingham

Children's Hospital Charity, the giant bears can be found in locations across the city centre, the intention being that the trail will help highlight some of central Brum's 'iconic spots and hidden gems'.

Telford Balloon Fiesta Telford Town Park, Shropshire, Fri 23 - Sun 25 August

A popular event in the borough's calendar, Telford Balloon Fiesta provides an impressive visual spectacle, with more than 30 balloons of varying shapes and sizes taking to the Shropshire skies. The fun kicks off on the Friday, courtesy of Night Glow Spectacular, which sees the arena lit up by illuminated balloons displayed against the darkening sky. New for 2024 are the Kids Comedy Show and Lego workshop. A Kids Zone, have-a-go activities, food and drink vendors and stalls to wander around, also feature.

Minsterley Show

Cruckton, nr Shrewsbury, Shropshire, Sat 17 August

Shropshire's 'oldest and most prestigious one-day agricultural show' returns for the 148th time, bringing with it its usual array of horticulture and livestock competitions. Main-ring entertainment, presented throughout the day, will include parades, supreme horse championships and performances by this year's headliners - The Knights of Albion.

A food hall, horticultural marquee and arts & crafts marquee further add to the show's wide-ranging programme.

Shropshire Petal Fields

Chadwell Lane, Newport, Fri 9 - Sun 18 August

Shropshire's successful flower-field experience returns to Newport this summer. Families can enjoy a beautiful backdrop of delphiniums, cornflowers, sunflowers and wildflowers, with plenty of focal points available for photo opportunities (think vintage tractors and huge butterfly wings!). Visitors can also make the most of being outdoors - in hopefully fine weather - by enjoying a picnic and sampling a scoop (or several!) of ice cream from the Shropshire Ice Cream Company's vintage caravan. Dog-friendly days take place on the 14th 17th & 18th. The chance to purchase freshly cut flower bouquets on-site, and a café serving drinks and refreshments, further add to the Petal Fields' appeal.

Weston Park, Shropshire, Sun 25 & Mon 26 August

Weston Park's Summer Fiesta returns for its fourth year, bringing with it a line-up of local artisan food & drink producers, unique crafts, street food, fairground rides, and live music from the Dirty Rockin Scoundrels. The whole estate will be open to explore, offering visitors the chance to take long walks around the parkland, relax in the formal gardens, run wild in the woodland adventure playground or enjoy a journey around Temple Wood on the miniature railway.

Dinosaurs On The Doorstep

Worcester City Art Gallery & Museum, until Sun 8 September

Come face to face with the dinosaurs that used to roam the UK - from harmless herbivores to terrifying tyrannosaurs. Giant dinosaur skeletons, real fossil bones and original fossils from 150 million years ago are all on display. There's also a dinosaur discovery camp - complete with shelter and campfire - a quiet space to read about all your favourite dinosaurs, and a hands-on Dino Activity Station.

QUEEN OF THE WEST END

One of musical theatre's best-known stars, Kerry Ellis has spent the past 25 years appearing in a number of iconic shows both in the West End and on Broadway. She's also toured extensively with Queen's Brian May and dazzled fans around the world with her solo tours. Kerry recently shared her joy at once again hitting the road this autumn...

It's been quite a journey for the kid who grew up wanting to be a pop star. And this autumn, Kerry Ellis will reflect on how far she's come in her new solo show, Queen Of The West End, which stops off at four Midlands venues over the next couple of months.

"It all started for me when I was a young girl," she recalls. "I must've been three or four when I went to the Judith Thomas Dance School. They'd hold classes in a little church hall, and I'd go there with other children to learn my first steps.

"There wasn't a grand plan back in those days. To be honest, there's never been a grand plan, and there still isn't now. I was probably sent there because my parents wanted to give me something positive to do. Well, either that or they wanted a bit of childcare and someone else to wear me out! Whatever their motivation, I loved dance from the moment I stepped through the door at Judith Thomas. I just took a shine to it, and that passion never left me. I loved it then and I still do now."

Dancing grabbed Kerry and made her feel alive. She wanted to be a pop star as well as a star of musical theatre.

"I didn't really have any singing lessons. I guess I had a couple when I was about 12, when my dad took me to a teacher called Olive, but that was all. Olive was actually a choir singer. She kind of tapped into this classical singing thing that I didn't even know existed. It was completely new for me. I'd always been a big 'belty' singer before I went to see her, screaming in my bedroom to Queen, Meatloaf or Bonnie Tyler. But Olive opened up a whole new soprano thing."

Kerry had a double cassette of Les Miserables, which was hugely influential. She knew the show from start to finish and would sing along with the cassette. It was the same with Miss Saigon. She grew to love the nation's biggest shows.

“My path wasn’t calculated, not in the slightest. I was listening to music, loving it and rehearsing it. Everything stemmed from there.

“I loved singing, I loved dancing, and I loved the world of entertainment. I’d do anything I could. I was rehearsing myself without realising it. I was stretching my voice and seeing what I was capable of, without knowing. I think dance gave me discipline, and being part of that dance school, when I was younger, was really important. I’d have to turn up three or four days a week, I’d have to be physical, I’d have to be on that ballet bar at quarter past three. There was a discipline with dance that stood me in brilliant stead later in my career.”

Kerry was a dreamer as a kid, and her parents were incredibly supportive. They bought into her goal of performing on Broadway and in the West End.

At 19, she got a job singing on a nine-month cruise around the Caribbean. When she returned, she did a quick tour of Magic Of The Musicals, with Marti Webb and Dave Willetts, and then went into My Fair Lady. She was the understudy for Eliza Doolittle, who was played by Martine McCutcheon.

When Martine became unwell, Kerry stepped up. “Because Martine was such a superstar, there was loads of media interest. When she was off, it was a big story, big news. We didn’t have social media then, but it was in all the newspapers.

“I found myself in the papers for the first time too, because I was the person taking on that role while Martine was off. It was quite an awakening to the West End. It really was a big deal. I was still young enough not to be phased by it, and in a sense there was no pressure on me because nobody knew who I was. I just needed to do the job. I just needed to deliver.

“I had no dress run, no costume run, nothing. It was ‘in at the deep end’. It was such an adrenaline rush. Afterwards I got to go on quite a few times because Martine became unwell again and eventually had to leave the show. Alex Jay and I split the role, and for a little while we got to be Eliza over a period of time.”

The show changed Kerry’s life forever. The offers flooded in.

“A lot happened in My Fair Lady. There was a performance when I went on for one of the ensemble dance tracks and sang a few lines.

What I didn’t know was that Brian May was in the audience with the casting director for We Will Rock You. Brian saw something in me, I don’t know what, and I don’t know how or why he picked me out.

“They found out I was the understudy for the lead, so they came back when I was playing Eliza. Again, that was all totally unbeknownst to me. They enjoyed my performance and asked me to audition for We Will Rock You, as Meat.

“I didn’t find out about any of that until after I’d got the job - all I knew was that I’d got an audition for We Will Rock You. There were a lot of auditions - I think I had seven in all. Brian and I joke about that to this day. He always says he knew I was going to be in the show, he knew I was the one, so I ask him why he made me go through seven auditions if he was so sure about me!”

We Will Rock You was a whirlwind of madness and craziness because it was new for Brian and Roger Taylor. There was a frenzy of huge celebrities and big, iconic people surrounding the show. The whole thing was a one-off. Nothing like that had really happened before.

“During rehearsals, Brian and Roger would be around a lot. They’d be in the rehearsal room and would watch everything, so we got to know them very well. Robert De Niro had some money in the show, so he came over to watch one of the run-throughs too. Then a stream of celebrities came to watch the show as soon as it opened. We met so many people, from Emma Thompson to Beyonce, from Britney Spears to P!nk. My hero, Liza Minnelli, came along too.

Kerry then moved into Miss Saigon. “Miss Saigon was a show that I’d loved growing up. The role of Ellen wasn’t massive, but it was a well-respected, leading female role. It was a big tick off the list. You want to be part of these big, iconic shows. That’s what drove me early on, and Miss Saigon was another bucket-list production. I’d listened to it on a double cassette as a teenager and seen it at Drury Lane before my career began. So when it went full circle and I got to start in a show that I’d seen as a youngster, the whole experience was pretty magical.”

She also starred in Les Misérables - the show she’d gone to see as an impressionable 13-year-old.

“Fast forward to 2005 and I was in that show, on that stage. I’d come full circle. I was doing all of those iconic songs that I’d always wanted to sing.

“There’s something special about the big hits, like Memory, in Cats, or I Dreamed A Dream, in Les Mis. People are waiting for you to sing them. They literally buy their ticket just for that. So to have that moment with those iconic songs is magical. I do look back very fondly and gratefully at that.

Wicked was another game-changer. It took Kerry to Broadway and helped her fulfil another big ambition in life.

“Broadway was everything I thought it would be - good and bad. When I went there, I’d been doing the show in London for nine years, and it was a really tough show. Anyone who’s been in Wicked will tell you how difficult it is. Vocally speaking, it’s unlike anything I’d ever sung before. It’s so much more difficult. I’d never been challenged by anything as much as I was by Wicked. I went through good moments, tough moments where I blew my voice out, and moments where I had to re-train myself to sing the show because it was so difficult.

“The Broadway gig came up and I literally finished the show in London on the Saturday, flew on the Sunday, then was in rehearsals on the Monday. Two days later, I was opening the show on Broadway and I was absolutely knackered. I was there for six months and it was wonderful; it was absolutely a dream come true.”

There’s been a lot, lot more, of course, and Kerry will unpack the highlights of her career in Queen Of The West End. “There’s a lot more to come. I can’t wait for my solo tour this autumn, and there’s another new record just around the corner, as well as lots more concerts on the horizon.

“So what’s coming in the future? I don’t know. The future is not yet written, is it? But I know one thing: I’m having the time of my life, and I can’t wait for whatever comes my way.”

Kerry Ellis presents Queen Of The West End at: Stratford Playhouse, Stratford-upon-Avon, Saturday 12 October; Dudley Town Hall, Wednesday 16 October; Lichfield Garrick, Wednesday 30 October; and Malvern Theatres, Saturday 23 November
