A DYING ART

Ore Oduba makes his crime-drama debut in a stage adaptation of Peter James' novel Picture You Dead

Peter James' popular DSI Grace novels might be set in the sunny south-coast location of Brighton, but they feature the dark and unsavory subjects of crime and murder. The books have not only been adapted into a number of ITV dramas, but also a series of hit stage plays. The seventh such adaptation, Picture You Dead, tours the UK this year and features Strictly winner, TV presenter & musical theatre star Ore Oduba, who here talks to What's On about the brand-new show and his glittering career...

Ore Oduba is a familiar face on the nation's screens, having regularly featured as a TV presenter since he began on CBBC's Newsround in 2008. In recent years, he's embarked on a flourishing career in musical theatre, touring the UK with Grease, The Rocky Horror Show, Pretty Woman: The Musical and - most recently - Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, in which he took the lead role of Caractacus Potts.

Ore's next venture swaps sequins for suspects, as he appears on stage in his first non-musical endeavour: an adaptation of Peter James' thriller Picture You Dead. Playing the antagonistic Stuart Piper, he's appearing alongside George Rainsford as DSI Roy Grace, the Brightonian detective who features in many of James' novels.

"It's really, really exciting," says Ore. "Not only the fact that you get to do something new, and be at the beginning of a new journey, and meet amazing creatively talented people, but this is a brand-new stage production. No-one's ever done it before; it's the first time it's ever been created. That's such a thrill, because it gives you free rein to put your stamp on it, and hopefully make it a really epic trip to the theatre."

The adaptation, just like the novel, takes a foray into the fine-art world - as you might have guessed from the play's punny title.

"Picture You Dead is the seventh stage adaptation of the very successful Peter James novels," says Ore. "They're all thrillers, and in this story, a very ordinary couple happens to find a very expensive piece of artwork at a car boot sale. From that point, their whole world turns upside down, and we find out about all of the characters that are affected by this serendipity. There's an intensity to it, but there's also a lot of humour - and at the end of the day it's a thriller, so there might be some trouble on stage, too!"

"My character is Stuart Piper, who is a little bit of a villain of the piece. It's actually my 'villain era' that we're all going into! I find it quite unnerveingly natural to just slip into that mode. It's a really lovely part, and there's a lot of eccentricity that I'm going to be able to bring to it."

It's not Ore's first venture into the world of Peter James, and he has a theory as to why the books, and their adaptations, have proved such a hit.

"I came to watch another one of the series - my friend Laura Whitmore was in one [entitled Not Dead Enough] a few years ago. I think the audiences for the Peter James novels love where it's set, and they love the way Peter creates these characters - always in a relatable world, set down in the Sussex and Brighton area. It feels like the kind of capers that could happen within your community."

Ore might have found fame on the TV screen, but his first love was performing in the theatre.

"It was the place that I always felt most at home when I was school-age. I was desperate to be in a school production, well before I was of age. I remember getting my first school role when I was 11, and just falling in love with being under that spotlight - being able to thrive. I think from a kid's perspective, if that's where you thrive, it's where you find your voice and where you find your calling. Actually, it's only hit me in the last couple of years that this is always where I was meant to be - or certainly where I was always going to find my happy place. It feels like a very natural space to be."

And while he's taken to musical theatre like a duck to water, he hopes this side-step into crime drama will broaden his theatrical horizons.

"I've been wanting to work with the wonderful producer of this show for many, many years. We've been friends for a long time, just trying to find the right project and fit it in within the schedule. We tried really, really hard to make this work, so I'm thrilled. I'm so at home in the theatre; it really is my happy place. I've been wanting to continue to develop the craft, and doing a play like this - it's hopefully going to be hugely popular and successful, but also the other talent on stage is mind-blowing - I feel very inspired."

Ore explains that each role he plays adds something new to his repertoire, with every experience carrying him forward to the next project - a fact which makes it hard for him to decide which character he's most enjoyed playing.

"The most important thread is that they've all allowed me to keep progressing. I hope that my career is long and always moving on an upward curve - I guess that's what you hope for. I certainly feel more confident now, going into an unknown - this is going to be my first play. I feel more confident, doing it off the back of all the work I've already done. The last job I did was Pretty Woman: The Musical. I had an amazing time - a really big role in an amazing, huge, commercial vehicle that was all around the country.

"I'm grateful for all of the roles - they've all been wonderful. I think you're only ever going to choose to do a job if you feel like you can offer something to it, and that's where the excitement comes. They've all been brilliant, whether that's Caractacus Potts in Chitty, or Happy Man in Pretty Woman, or Brad Majors in The Rocky Horror Show - all of them have been very, very special to me. I look back with the fondest of memories."

On the other hand, jumping into something new brings its own challenges - but as Ore says, there's always an element of the unexpected when it comes to the theatre. And that's what it's all about!

"The unknown - that's what's exciting about live theatre; every day is brand new. We're doing the same show, but there are always new challenges. I love music, so it will be, how do I get my music fix, outside of being in a musical? I'll probably keep putting the Wicked soundtrack on in my dressing room every day, and that will give me the hit that I need. I'm really looking forward to it!"

PUB TALK

Set in a Dublin pub, Two Pints is a two-hander play by acclaimed author Roddy Doyle in which the main characters spout a lot of drivel but also get to the heart of the human condition. With a new version premiering at Coventry's Belgrade Theatre next month, its director, Sara Joyce, explains what audiences can expect...

Originally written as a series of Facebook posts by award-winning writer Roddy Doyle (best known for penning The Commitments and Paddy Clarke Ha Ha Ha), Two Pints features two middle-aged men conducting largely banal but often hilarious chats over a few beers in a Dublin pub. The action - and it's a stretch of the imagination to call it that - takes place over a 15-month period during which one of the men witnesses the demise and then loss of a parent. The play beautifully illustrates how bar-room banter can often mask topics of greater heft... First produced by Dublin's Abbey Theatre in 2017 and initially performed in pubs before switching to the stage, a new production of Two Pints receives its UK premiere at Coventry's Belgrade Theatre next month, with upcoming Irish director Sara Joyce at the helm. We chatted to Sara to find out more...

Even though the two men in the play probably wouldn't call themselves friends, they are clearly seeking - and finding - a connection, which isn't a stereotypical male thing to do.

No. If we're generalising, we'd say women are more inclined to talk to each other and men aren't. However you want to cut it, there's probably some truth to that in terms of cultural conditioning. So how do we have spaces where people can talk to each other, regardless of who they are? I have such an aspiration to show meaningful connection, and that's what the play is doing best.

Much of Two Pints was written over a decade ago, so some of the cultural references in the men's banter might be a bit dated. Has Roddy freshened up any of the dialogue?

Absolutely. Specific references have changed to make it resonant for today, but it's retained its core. There's a mastery to his writing that is so hidden because there's a kind of ordinariness to the speech - an off-the-cuffness, as well as Roddy's rhythms and structure.

The original production had a lengthy gestation period, developing as it toured pubs in Ireland before reaching the Dublin stage. Has that helped make it easier for you?

Definitely. One of the reasons I'm so in gratitude to Caitriona [McLaughlin, who directed the original] and that first cast is that I have the privilege of working with something that's so dramaturgically sound. I shouldn't admit this, but there's very little that I can do except get in the way of it!

Speaking of getting in - or out of - the way, how do you intend to stage it? The Belgrade's B2 is a fairly flexible space, but you obviously don't want two men sitting at a bar with their backs to the audience the whole time.

The challenge was extraordinary for the designer, Claire Winfield. She's been at the Belgrade for 10 years and is an amazing talent. Because of the configuration of the theatre, it was almost mathematical to work out where the actors can be - it's kind of amazing what she has done. They're predominantly sat on stools for the entire show, which sounds like it could be boring, but honestly it's not!

We've already acknowledged that it's a male-dominated play, and there's obviously a strong Irish bent. How do you pitch it to a wider audience that might not connect to those two elements?

It goes back to when I first got the play and thought 'Why have they sent it to me?' My work has been incredibly female-centric - I typically only work with women - but the experience I had when reading it, and maybe this is why there's a cleverness in the approach to working with me and Caitriona, is that I was affected in spite of my [preconceptions]. The play has a kind of consciousness of that - it's aware of, and the men are aware of, being in this shifting time.

It feels like we're eavesdropping on a conversation about nothing and everything all at once...

It's hilarious, but then it kind of gets you. For something that is just two men talking, it creates pure feeling. At its heart it's a play about existence and life.

With a message for all ages?

Exactly. I think about my parents coming to see it and how they will feel seen, because they'd be a similar age to these men and [know] what it is to have lived through a life.

The man is grieving a father, but he's still a son and that's still his dad - none of that goes away. At the same time, for somebody like me, it's quite confronting to think 'What are you doing with your life?' And for younger audiences there's a gift of experience and wisdom in this conversation that they wouldn't necessarily get to hear [anywhere else].

Texting and social media has definitely changed how younger people communicate, and even though the play started out on Facebook, it really highlights the importance and uniqueness of face-to-face conversation.

I think there's something in us that needs connection. It's almost an animal need, so I trust that it'll come back. It also explains a love of theatre for me, where everyone is in a room together.

So it's Two Pints that should go down nicely?

I hope so! If nothing else it's a really beautiful play and a great story. I trust that people who come will just have a really lovely time with these two men.

Henge

Marrs Bar, Worcester, Fri 18 April

"Attention Earth! We bring you the gift of cosmic dross - a kind of music new to your world. There are no Earth words to describe these sounds, but you will learn how to love and dance again!"

So speaks the phenomenon that is Henge, a band of extraterrestrial joymongers who've been providing their ever-expanding fanbase with an out-of-this-world experience for the better part of a decade. The cosmic dross of which they speak is a music that aims to defy definition, lurking somewhere between rave and prog rock in a space 'that nobody knew existed'. As you might imagine with visitors from another planet, the boys sport a somewhat unusual on-stage appearance; expect reptilian masks and plasma-ball headwear (see the below image for a clearer picture!)...

Roddy Woomble

The Tin at The Coal Vaults, Coventry, Wed 30 April

Known for his enigmatic lyrics and warm baritone voice, Roddy Woomble has spent the past two decades fronting much-loved Scottish alternative rock band Idlewild, with whom he's recorded nine studio albums. He's also managed to release seven solo records during that time, including My Secret Is My Silence (2006), Listen To Keep (2013) The Deluder (2017), and last autumn's Sometime During The Night We Fell Off The Map.

Eddi Reader Band

Huntingdon Hall, Worcester, Sat 12 April; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Fri 25 April

With numerous BRIT Awards decorating her mantelpiece, Scottish singer-songwriter Eddi Reader is well remembered for her association with Fairground Attraction, with whom she scored a UK number one, Perfect, in 1988.

Her solo-career highlights have included her 2003 album of material by Scotland's 'bard', Robert Burns. The subsequent international resurgence of interest in Burns' work saw Reader awarded an MBE in 2006 for her outstanding contribution to the arts.

Samantics / Nick Parker

Katie Fitzgeralds, Stourbridge, Sat 5 April

Who doesn't love a double header - and this one's offering some honest-to-goodness star quality from two guys who're definitely enjoying a bit of a bromance.

Rap-poet Samantics has been described as a one-man machine, and it's easy to see why, given his liking for bringing together all manner of sounds - think ukulele, piano, bass, beats, harmonies, blips and bleeps, all combined via loop station and sampler...

Just like Samantics, Glastonbury-based Nick Parker has a well-established solo career.

He's also shared a stage with plenty of the music industry's finest, including The Wedding Present and Bright Eyes.

The Dualers

hmv Empire, Coventry, Sat 5 April

South East London nine-piece The Dualers bring their Jamaican-style rhythm & blues sound to Coventry, presenting a gig which they're promising will boast 'infectious beats, singalong anthems, and an incredible live atmosphere'. Support comes from The Lloyd McGrath Collective.

Newton Faulkner

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Wed 30 April

Newton Faulkner's penchant for tapping and hitting his guitar has certainly helped him stand out from the crowd - as has his undoubted talent as a musician. One of the most successful UK singer-songwriters of the 21st century, Newton cites Del Amitri, Tom Waits, Stevie Wonder, The Rolling Stones and James Brown among the many and varied performers to have influenced his music. He's visiting the Midlands this month with his Feels Like Home Tour 3.

LIFE OF BRYAN

Bryan Adams talks about doing what he does best and doing the best he can...

Fifty years into his musical career, Canadian rocker Bryan Adams is still going strong, with an arena tour and a new album on the way. “What else am I gonna do?” he asks What’s On...

Readers of a certain vintage will doubtless find it hard to digest the fact that Bryan Adams is now 65, or that he’s been in the music business for half a century.

By way of mitigation, the raspy-voiced rocker started young. He bought his first electric guitar at the age of 10, was performing in bands by the time he was 15, signed his first record deal at 18, and released his debut album when he was 20.

That was in 1980, and the next couple of decades saw his career skyrocket. A conveyor belt of hit singles included Run To You, Somebody, Summer Of 69, All For Love (with Sting and Rod Stewart), When You’re Gone (with Mel C) and of course (Everything I Do) I Do It For You, which spent 16 weeks at number one in the UK. That song alone sold a staggering 15 million copies worldwide, with Adams’ total album sales now close to 100 million.

It was an incredible era, but the softly spoken Canadian admits much of it is now a blur. “It was such a big touring time for us,” he says. “We did thousands of gigs, but I don’t remember a lot of it. If it hadn’t been for videos, I don’t think I’d remember any of it. I wonder if it’s just because your brain only has the capacity to store a certain amount of information, and the rest of it falls by the wayside.”

The singer’s profile might have dipped in the subsequent decades - like many other rock acts from the era - but falling by the wayside was never likely to happen, not least because Adams has kept writing (including a Pretty Woman musical), recording and performing live throughout.

The tour for his last album, So Happy It Hurts, spanned three years and 16 countries, wrapping in Australia in February, and after what seems like an indecently brief pause, he’s already back on the road. After squeezing in a few shows in Las Vegas in March (“to keep my agent happy”), his upcoming UK tour kicks off another lengthy trek round the globe. What on earth keeps his foot so hard on the gas?

“I don’t really think about it - I just keep going. I run the ideas past my band and make sure they’re okay to do the work. We take a break, see our families and then go back out. I was saying to Keith [Scott, his long-term sidekick and guitarist] the other day - what else are we gonna do? I love what I do, and to be fair, for example, our Australian tour was the biggest tour of Australia we’ve ever done. It was absolutely massive, and we could’ve played another week if we’d known it was gonna go so well.”

The latest tour is ostensibly to promote new album Roll With The Punches, although the LP won’t actually hit the shops or streaming services until September. Instead, Adams plans to drip-feed individual tunes to audiences over the next few months - although he insists the live shows won’t be dominated by tunes people don’t know.

“You’ve gotta play the songs that people love - that’s the whole point of being on tour. Then you pepper it with a couple of new ones if they go over well. So far, Roll With The Punches is going over really well, so we’ll keep it in there.”

The album’s title track already sounds like a classic Adams rocker. The positive reception, and success of the recent shows, sees him on an upward curve after a few tough years during which he lost his record deal and parted company with his long-term manager. He now manages himself, runs his own record label (the sarcastically titled Bad Records) and is a lot happier - and less frustrated - as a result.

“I’m completely independent now, and it’s such an amazing thing. For me, there’s no point having a record deal. A few years ago, I went in to see a big label, as I had this album, Get Up, that I’d done with Jeff Lynne. I was super excited about it, but the record company’s head of PR just looked at me and said ‘It might be a great record, but I wouldn’t know what to do with you.’”

There’ll be no such conundrum when Roll With The Punches is released on Bryan’s own label. The song’s title is all about carrying on in the face of adversity.

“I think it’s timely in the sense that there’s all kinds of things happening in the world - for example, the Americans going after Canada,” he starts, before diverting to more generic, as well as personal, concerns. “People are always going to try and drag you down, but you’ve just gotta get back up and live another day. Over the last few years, I’ve had my own ups and downs - getting dropped by my label, forming my own record company, being an independent artist and other things associated with my business going back a few years. So a lot of it comes from this new-found independence. Nothing’s gonna get me down.”

Bryan has initially chosen to move forward by looking back. The new label’s first release was newly recorded versions of two songs he wrote when he was 21... for Kiss. Rock And Roll Hell and War Machine appeared on the glam rock band’s 1982 album, Creatures Of The Night, and helped give him the confidence to write with and for other artists. As well as delving into the archives for new material, he also released live versions of three of his early albums, all recorded during a three-night residency at the Albert Hall in 2024.

“It’s been really fun to look at the past and try to find ways to bring it into the future. At the same time, the ideas don’t stop coming - I still write songs, and I’m happy to put those out as well.”

Whether any of the songs turn out to be hits seems largely inconsequential. That’s partly because Bryan is happy to still be doing what he loves, but also because he knows he’s unlikely to get played on the radio - something that really gets the bee flying round his bonnet.

“I think the record business is quite ageist, really - once you’re out, you’re not allowed back in. I could put out Summer Of 69 now and it wouldn’t get played. Although thinking about it, it didn’t get played at the time either!

“There’s just a load of gatekeepers now that don’t let certain things get played on the radio. One of the songs on Get Up was called Go Down Rocking, which is kind of my raison d’être - I don’t give a sh*t what’s gonna happen with all the different types of music that are out there; I’m just gonna do what I do best, and that’s rock out.

“Believe me, I have no expectations about any of this - for the tour, for the music. I’m just doing what I do and doing the best I can.”

Founded in 2001 by organist & conductor Christopher Monks, and using authentic period instruments, Warwick-based baroque consort Armonico turn their talents to the task of performing Handel's most spectacular choral showpiece: Israel In Egypt.

A biblically epic composition, the work includes graphic musical renderings of flies, frogs, hailstones, the river Nile turning to blood, and the parting of the Red Sea.

Spires Philharmonic Orchestra & Chorus

Burgess Hall, King Henry VIII School, Coventry, Sat 12 April

"We are acoustic adventurers," explain Spires Philharmonic Orchestra & Chorus, a community of ambitious musicmakers from Coventry. "We seek out unheard gems and then programme them alongside classics we know and love, crafting concerts that are not only outstanding to listen to but that we love to perform, too."

The choir and pro/am orchestra's latest outing sees them presenting 'an emotional and thought-provoking performance of Bach's St John Passion, with its ever-important message of compassion, hope and ultimate salvation'.

Sitkovetsky Trio

Malvern Theatres, Sun 27 April

Since being formed by students at the Yehudi Menuhin School in 2007, the Sitkovetsky Piano Trio have accumulated an impressive haul of coveted silverware. Comprising violinist Alexander Sitkovetsky, pianist Wu Qian and cellist Isang Enders, the uber-talented ensemble visit Malvern to present a concert featuring works by Beethoven (Trio in D Op70 No1 Ghost), Ravel (Trio in A minor), and a new piece by Lena Sierova (Piano Trio).

The one-hour concert will conclude with a performance of Gerald Finzi's Welcome, Sweet And Sacred Feast.

Worcestershire Early Music: Amyas

Angel Centre, Worcester, Sun 6 April

Describing themselves as a period instrument group specialising in exuberant performances of historical repertoire, Amyas present a wide range of music, from well-loved classics of the 18th century - which they promise to imbue with their typical flair! - to electronic manipulation of medieval songs and dances (and everything in between).

Their Worcestershire Early Music concert, titled The Ghost In The Machine, aims to uncover 'the fascinating and little-known performance style found in mechanical musical instruments (barrel organs and organ clocks) produced in 18th-century England'.

Ex Cathedra - Bach: St Matthew Passion

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Fri 18 April

A favourite at Easter, Bach's dramatic telling of the Passion of Christ continues to be one of classical music's most profound experiences. Sung in German with English surtitles, St Matthew Passion is here performed by Ex Cathedra's choir & baroque orchestra and Academy of Vocal Music, coming together under the direction of conductor Jeffrey Skidmore. "Education and participation are central to our work," explains Jeffrey, in talking about the concert. "The traditional Good Friday Bach Passion in Symphony Hall has evolved into a powerful and poignant opportunity for 'historical' participation. This brings all the elements of our work together through a liturgical reconstruction similar to that which might have been heard in the St Thomas Church in Leipzig in the 18th century [where the earliest verified performance of the work took place, on Good Friday in 1727]."

Life is very much sunny-side-up for Kurtis Conner at the moment. With millions of subscribers to his YouTube channel, a hugely popular podcast, and sold-out signs going up at gigs across the globe, there's little wonder the Canadian funnyman has been hailed 'one to watch' by Variety. Peddling an often absurdist style of humour, Kurtis is visiting Birmingham this month with The Goodfellow World Tour, a show which he's promising is chock-a-block with his freshest and funniest material. "There's still a part of me that's like, all these people are just here by accident - they don't mean to be here," the 30-year-old comic told themudmag.com, in contemplating the ever-increasing popularity of his stand-up shows. "It's weird because I feel like I don't do anything to deserve it - but they're there, so it's really cool."

Andrew Lawrence

Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Thurs 10 April & Thurs 8 May

It's fair to say that Andrew Lawrence's profile has been considerably raised by his involvement in various social-media controversies over the years.

On Facebook a decade ago, he accused television panel shows of indulging in "liberal back-slapping", claiming they featured "ageing, balding, fat men, ethnic comedians and women posing as comedians" who spent their time making jokes at the expense of Nigel Farage. More recently, he caused a stir when, following the defeat of the England football team in the final of the Euros - on penalties - he tweeted: "All I'm saying is the white guys scored." He then followed up with "I can see that this has offended a lot of people, and I'm sorry that black guys are bad at penalties." The controversy resulted in the Surrey-born comedian being dropped by his agent. He visits the Gatehouse this month and next with latest show Still On The Naughty Step.

Russell Kane

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Sun 27 April; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Fri 5 & Sat 6 December

Past publicity blurb for this fella said it all: "Strap in for some super-speed sunderings and inconvenient sociology in a show of self-soiling merriment that will leave you with rickets."

In short, Russell Kane is a very funny man - and it's not just his publicist who thinks so. Russell has been drawing a crowd since bursting onto the scene more than 20 years ago, serving up liberal doses of humour at a frenetic pace. The London-born comedian visits the Midlands this month with latest touring show HyperActive.

RAZZLE DAZZLE

Strictly's Janette Manrara talks about making her musical theatre debut as Roxie Hart in Chicago

Janette Manrara might be better known for her moves than her voice, given her status as one of the pros on Strictly Come Dancing, but this year sees her making the most of her musical theatre training. Janette is taking to the stage as Roxie Hart, one of the iconic leading ladies of Chicago, in a production which tours to the region this month and then returns in June. What's On spoke to her about her journey into the spotlight, finding a work/life balance, and All That Jazz...

Janette Manrara might be best known in the UK as a professional dancer on Strictly, appearing on the BBC series between 2013 and 2020, but now she's taking to the stage in a brand-new way. This year sees Janette making her professional musical theatre debut, playing the iconic character of Roxie Hart in a touring production of Chicago, which visits the Midlands this month.

"It's my musical theatre debut at 41," she says, "and I don't think I could have had a better role to kickstart this chapter of my career! I've been a fan of Chicago for many, many years. I've seen it many times and I've seen the film loads, as I'm sure many of us have. Roxie is such a fun leading lady to play because she's not your 'good girl next door' type at all. There's not many musicals where you get women misbehaving as leads, so it's really fun to play her."

The story centres around chorus girl Roxie, who is on trial for murder. With the help of flashy lawyer Billy Flynn, she steps into the media spotlight - vying for notoriety and celebrity with her fellow inmate Velma Kelly. "I'm so in love with the cast - they're all so talented. Djalenga Scott - DJ we call her for short - she plays my Velma. She's so talented, so good. I watch her from the side as she's doing her thing, and I'm just in awe of her. That's the same for the whole cast. Velma's a big part of the show for me; she's my partner in crime - quite literally."

With her husband and one-time Strictly co-star, Aljaž Škorjanec, Janette has a daughter, Lyra, born in 2023 - so the three of them will be hoping to find that ever-elusive work/life balance as she tours to 21 UK venues.

"That is the big puzzle of life, which I don't think there will ever be an answer for. I have to give massive, massive credit to Aljaž because, as my husband, as a man, and as my best friend, he's really going to hold the fort at home with Lyra. I'm just so grateful that we have that kind of relationship, where we really co-parent and we really are a team. I'm going to run home on my days off, straight after the show, so I can wake up in the morning at home as much as I possibly can. Aljaž and Lyra are going to come and visit me and stay with me some weeks. I said to him, I can't be more than a week away from her, so he's going to help make sure I spend as much time as I can with him and her.

"Having a partner like him by my side makes that work/life balance easier to accomplish. It's never easy. I had a big moment a few days ago, just thinking 'Wow, I'll be putting Lyra to bed myself just once a week...' If you think about it, that's not a lot of nights that I get to put my own daughter to bed."

Janette is, of course, best known for her dancing, but some fans might be surprised to learn that her love of dance grew from a beginning in musical theatre. She began formal dance training at the age of 19, finding it was the skill at which she truly excelled. Returning to her roots as a 'triple threat' musical performer (dancing, singing and acting) is proving to be quite a journey down memory lane...

"I've always enjoyed musicals, and I started in musical theatre. I've done A Chorus Line, I've done Cats, I've done West Side Story, I've even done Chicago - but as a kid, as a teenager. Now, to be in my 40s doing my first-ever musical - it's such a full-circle moment for my career. I'm not Jeanette on stage, I'm Roxie. And the people around me - it's not Kevin Clifton, it's Billy Flynn; it's not DJ, it's Velma; it's not Brenda Edwards, it's Mama. To be in a room where all the people are going with you creatively, and not being afraid to be those characters, is so fascinating. You kind of feel like a kid again. You're playing 'imagination' - it's really cool to go back into that space, as an adult." Preparing to play the role of Roxie has involved Janette looking back on previous renditions of the show - as well as looking forward to her own interpretation.

"I've been doing a lot of work with my acting coach - he's been incredible. We've dissected the script a hundred times and sat and watched different women play her throughout the years, finding inspiration from all the different, epic women who have been Roxie in the past, taking bits from each of them, and finding my own version of her. I think that's what's nice about Roxie Hart: you can play her your own way."

And while Janette is truly in her element when dancing, the sheer physicality of singing, acting and dancing in musical numbers has brought with it a few surprises.

"I have to sing on a ladder, in Funny Honey, and the ladder is quite high. I have to climb the ladder, swing around the ladder, up and down the ladder, on music, on time; so that's interesting - and different!"

Outside of the performance world, last autumn saw the publication of Janette's first book: Tiny Dancer, Big World. The book is subtitled 'How to find fulfillment from the inside out' and provides an insight into Janette's motivational and inspirational life lessons.

"I always really liked writing - but I didn't want to write a book unless I had something really meaningful to say. I was nearing the cusp of turning 40, I had just become a mother with Lyra, and I had done my wellbeing certification. I learned so much about the human mind and how it works, and I found that a lot of the tools that I learned really changed my approach to a lot of things in life - made me a calmer person. "A really special aspect of the book is that I wrote it with my sister. My sister's a writer - she kind of stepped in, and I would say that she zhuzhed it up a bit and gave it a twist here and there. I wrote the whole book myself, which I'm really proud of - not a lot of people do that. That process was gruesome, but so therapeutic at the same time. Lesly, my sister, helped make it that little bit more special and that little bit more beautiful to read."

And while she's got plenty on her plate for now, Janette hasn't closed the door on writing.

"I have a lot of life and career left to do before I can do the autobiography! But this book felt really nice because it's not about me. You learn about me in the book, but it's not about me; it's about the reader finding what works for them... I really hope it helps people."

With her musical theatre career now (high) kicking off in fine style, what's next for Janette? After all, it's quite unusual for a performer to make their debut playing one of theatre's great leading ladies...

"I said to my agent, if I'm starting at Roxie Hart, where do I go? Roxie is so iconic. I really enjoy the whole musical theatre process: learning a script; working on the singing; dancing, obviously, which is a huge passion of mine anyway. We'll see! There are so many great musicals out there - and there are also some really amazing new productions that I would love to go and watch, just to see which character pops out and makes me feel like I'd love to play it. There's so much new stuff happening in the world of musical theatre. Watch this space!"

Chicago shows at The Alexandra, Birmingham, from Monday 14 to Saturday 19 April, and the Wolverhampton Grand Theatre from Monday 23 to Saturday 28 June

& Juliet Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 22 April - Sat 3 May; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 12 - Sat 17 May

Premiered in 2019 and featuring a string of hits by Max Martin, & Juliet tells an alternative story of Shakespeare’s famous heroine. In sharp contrast to the original tale, this one sees Juliet realising that she can survive without Romeo - a revelation that prompts her to set off on her own journey, both in love and life. The award-winning production, which has proved a massive hit across four continents, visits the Midlands this month with Wanted band member and 2015 Strictly Come Dancing winner Jay McGuinness taking on the role of the Stratford bard himself. The part of Lance, meanwhile, will be played at the Hippodrome by TV presenter Dr Ranj Singh and at the Regent next month by Steps star Lee Latchford-Evans. Featured pop anthems include Britney Spears’ Baby One More Time and Katy Perry’s Roar, as well as chart toppers Since U Been Gone, It’s My Life and Can’t Stop The Feeling.

Ghost The Musical

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 1 - Sat 5 April

The ever-popular stage version of the award-winning film makes a welcome return to the region. For those not in the know, the production tells the story of a ghost named Sam, who, caught between this world and the next, is desperately attempting to communicate with girlfriend Molly, to warn her that she’s in mortal danger from his murderer... A timeless tale about the power of love - and beautifully blending the genres of romance and comedy - Ghost features The Righteous Brothers’ Unchained Melody and numerous songs co-written by Eurythmics’ Dave Stewart.

Tambo & Bones

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Wed 9 - Sat 12 April

Slam poet & playwright Dave Harris has scored a significant hit with Tambo & Bones. A satire about America’s racial history, which also takes a peek into a wildly imaginative vision of the future, the show has not only been hailed a necessary piece of theatre but also ‘unpredictably bonkers’, ‘clever and prickly’ and every bit ‘as entertaining as it is unnerving’.

The story starts in the past and follows the fortunes of the initially down-on-their-luck title characters, a comedy double-act stuck in a minstrel show. But as time moves forward, Tambo & Bones’ fortunes radically change - and so too does the world around them... The Thursday performance of the production will be followed by a free-to-attend discussion hosted by theologian, broadcaster & documentary filmmaker Professor Robert Beckford.

Dear Evan Hansen

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 1 - Sat 5 April; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 17 - Sat 21 June

Olivier, Tony and Grammy award-winning musical Dear Evan Hansen makes a welcome return this month.

Packed with some of the biggest musical theatre songs of the last decade, and here presented by Nottingham Playhouse, the hit show focuses on title character and high-school student Evan, a young man struggling with social anxiety disorder, who has a therapeutic and self-intended letter stolen by classmate Connor Murphy.

When Connor later dies by suicide, Evan inserts himself into the boy's past - a decision that soon leads to a series of lies and confrontational events...

"Ultimately, Dear Evan Hansen is about hope," says Ryan Kopel, who plays the title character. "No matter what you're going through, its message is that there is always someone to talk to and reasons why you should go on. That's what I'd like people to take away from the show."

Just Between Ourselves

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Tues 29 April - Sat 3 May

Mention Alan Ayckbourn and a list of brilliant observational comedies springs readily to mind, the most famous among which - think Relatively Speaking, Absurd Person Singular, The Norman Conquests, Bedroom Farce - were penned in the 1960s and 70s. This particular offering sprang from his ever-fertile imagination way back in 1976 and is widely considered to be his most emotionally charged play.

Bringing together five birthdays with two unhappy marriages and one possessive mother, Just Between Ourselves has been hailed a masterclass in suburban comedy and heartbreak. The production is presented by London Classic Theatre and forms part of the company's 25th-anniversary celebrations.

Ordinary Days: The Musical

Old Joint Stock Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 9 - Sun 20 April

The success eight years ago of Ordinary Days' initial run at the Old Joint Stock Theatre no doubt played its part in the venue's decision to make the show its latest in-house production. Hailed by its publicity as 'a life-affirming and heartfelt musical that will leave audiences laughing one second and weeping uncontrollably the next', the show follows the fortunes of four young New Yorkers whose lives intersect as they search for fulfillment, happiness, love... and cabs.

The Pocket Dream

Lichfield Garrick, Thurs 24 April - Sat 3 May

Lichfield Garrick's next in-house production is this reworking of Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Written by Elly Brewer & Sandi Toksvig - and first performed by Nottingham Playhouse more than 30 years ago - The Pocket Dream tells the story of a company of strolling players whose production of the bard's most popular comedy hangs in the balance. Can a motley crew of makeshift mechanicals possibly save the day?...

The Garrick's longtime pantomime favourites, Sam Rabone and Ben Thornton - here reuniting far earlier in the year than usual - are joined in the show by Joe Feeney. Joe starred alongside Sam and Ben in last Christmas' production of Jack And The Beanstalk, playing the character of the ne'er-do-well Luke Backinanger (geddit?).

Only Fools & Horses

Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sat 12 April

A major hit in the West End, the stage-musical version of long-running BBC TV comedy series Only Fools And Horses will no doubt prove itself to be a nice little earner - as Del Boy himself might say - during its early-month run in Birmingham.

Starring much-loved Fast Show and Gone Fishing comedian Paul Whitehouse - who's co-written the show - in the role of Grandad, the production not only features material from the television series but also boasts 'an ingenious script and 20 hilarious songs'.

Edward II

Swan Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon,
until Sat 5 April

Edward II is perhaps best known for a scene in which the king is assassinated by having a red-hot poker thrust up his backside. But Christopher Marlowe's classic tale of love, lust and ambition has plenty to offer besides an eye-watering dose of fatal anal trauma. Here being presented by the Royal Shakespeare Company, it tells the story of a young monarch who lets his passion for another man influence his every decision - even those which are concerned with the gravest matters of state...

A Matter Of Life And Death

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme,
until Sat 19 April

New Vic Artistic Director Theresa Heskins has adapted and directs this stage version of the much-loved 1941 film starring David Niven. The story's main character is World War Two pilot Peter Carter, who thinks he's about to meet his maker when his plane goes down just off the coast of England. Instead, he finds himself face-to-face with June, the American radio operator who kept him company on what he thought would be his final journey. Peter soon falls in love with her and looks ahead to a bright future - until, that is, a celestial entity makes contact to inform him that he should in fact have died in the plane crash...

Dracula

Lichfield Garrick, Wed 16 & Thurs 17 April;
Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Fri 18 & Sat 19 April

Bram Stoker's Dracula is best known from its many and varied cinematic incarnations - but as theatrical productions like The Woman In Black have ably illustrated, a spiningtling story of horror can work just as well on the stage as on the screen...

Cue, the critically acclaimed Blackeyed Theatre's brand-new adaptation, a production which imaginatively blends Victorian Gothic with the contemporary... The company has deemed the show suitable for audience members aged 11 upwards.

Cabin Fever

Albany Theatre, Coventry, Fri 11 & Sat 12 April

The sky's the limit for Beth Miles and Aurelia Harris-Johnstone, who this month land their airborne comedy Cabin Fever in Coventry on the back of a host of positive reviews at the Edinburgh Fringe. Promising to take turbulence to a whole new level, the uber-talented duo bring to life a planes-worth of passengers travelling from London Heathrow to Los Angeles, delving into various characters' back stories along the way. Given Cabin Fever's rapturous reception in the Scottish capital last summer, this could well be one flight you won't want to miss.

The Detective Dog

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Sat 12 & Sun 13 April

Given the success of so many other stage adaptations of Julia Donaldson's hugely popular stories (see, for example, The Smartest Giant In Town elsewhere on this page), it's a real no-brainer to mount a live version of The Detective Dog. The canine sleuth of the title is Nell, whose detective skills are certainly not in question; whether it's finding a lost shoe or discovering who left an unpleasant 'surprise' on the new gravel pathway, her ever-sniffing nose is always hard at work. So when the books at her owner Peter's school disappear one morning, it isn't long before Nell is on the case and sniffing out the culprit!... Created with three- to seven-year-olds in mind, the show is being presented by Bristol-based Tiny & Tall Productions.

Horrible Histories: Terrible Tudors & Awful Egyptians

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Thurs 10 - Sat 12 April

If you love the Horrible Histories series - and why the heck wouldn't you?! - then Terrible Tudors and Awful Egyptians are two shows well worth catching.

Audience members attending the former will find out all about the fate of Henry's headless wives and his punch-up with the Pope, while families checking out the latter will be asked whether they're ready to rumble with Ramesses and - somewhat more alarmingly - if they dare to enter through 'the gates of the afterlife'!... Both productions show on each of the three days - visit The Alexandra's website to check starting times.

Shark In The Park

Patrick Centre, Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sun 6 April

Nick Sharratt has illustrated hundreds of books, a significant percentage of which have been his own.

One of these is the hugely successful Shark In The Park!, a children's story about a young lad named Timothy who goes to his local park to try out his new telescope. While there, he thinks he spots a shark - and not just on one occasion either, but several times in several places!... The popularity of the book prompted Nick to write and illustrate two follow-up offerings - Shark In The Dark! and Shark In The Park On A Windy Day!. All three stories are featured in this much-loved stage production from the highly rated Nonsense Room theatre company. The show is suitable for children aged two-plus.

Milkshake! Live On Holiday

Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Tues 22 April; The Civic, Brierley Hill, Mon 26 May; Palace Theatre, Redditch, Wed 28 May; Malvern Theatres, Tues 29 July

The Milkshake! pals are heading off on holiday - and Midlands-based families are invited to join them for a fun-packed new adventure...

If you've watched the TV series and/or been to a previous live production, you'll already know what to expect from a Milkshake! show. If not, get ready for an event that promises lots of laughter, bucketloads of family fun, bags of audience participation and plenty of singing and dancing...

The Smartest Giant In Town

Birmingham Town Hall, Sat 12 & Sun 13 April; Swan Theatre, Worcester, Wed 23 & Thurs 24 April

Fierylight & Little Angel Theatre are the creatives behind this stage adaptation of Julia Donaldson & Axel Scheffler's much-loved story. The title character is George, a giant who decides his scruffy days are a thing of the past and buys himself some oversized clothes. But when he encounters various animals needing his assistance - and, more particularly, his newly purchased items of clothing - George soon realises that it isn't clothes that maketh the giant but rather a gargantuan sense of generosity and a colossal warm heart...

Bing's Birthday

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Sat 12 April; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Wed 23 & Thurs 24 April; Birmingham Town Hall, Sat 14 & Sun 15 June; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Tues 1 & Wed 2 July

Bing's Birthday's promoters are confident that their brand-new show is a perfect 'first theatre trip' for pre-schoolers and their families. And why wouldn't they be, given that the production is awash with fun, laughter, music, puppetry and dressing-up?... Based on the animated CBeebies television series, the production runs for 70 minutes, including an interval.

Wiltshire-based performers & theatre makers Iona Johnson and Anna Harriott here bring together live music and puppetry to present a play about the climate emergency.

Room On The Broom

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Wed 23 - Sat 26 April

Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler, the creators of The Gruffalo are the duo behind this 'spellbinding' tale of a witch who makes the mistake of thinking she can fit a daft dog, a beautiful bird and a friendly frog - as well as her own cat - on her broomstick without it snapping in two. Rude Science

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Sat 19 April; Malvern Theatres, Fri 25 April; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Mon 21 July

As science shows go, BBC Gastronom Stefan Gates is pretty darned certain that his Rude Science production is the most revolting in the whole wide world. And he could well be right, given that it involves enormous bottoms, pee-powered fireworks, fabulous fart machines and vast whoopee cushions! Science stunts and spectacular experiments abound in a show that promises to be both entertaining and educational. Suitable for children aged five and older.

Mিনny Stynker

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Sun 27 April

A bedroom becomes a forest and a school turns into a solar system in this Soap Soup Theatre family production. Telling the story of Kit - a child living in a strange new city - and celebrating the magic of creativity and the imagination. The show is ideal for children aged between three and eight.

Those unfamiliar with The Great Baldini are advised to imagine an amalgamation of arch Bond villain Ernst Blofeld and legendary magician/comedian Tommy Cooper. The self-proclaimed - presumably with his tongue firmly in his cheek - 'emperor of illusion, prince of prestidigitation and maharajah of mystery' is stopping off in the region this month to tell the story of his partnership with his faithful companion, Baldwin The Magical Dog... Bristol-based Baldini comes complete with a host of five-star reviews and is a firm family favourite, so be sure to check him out before he disappears in the proverbial puff of smoke...

Cinderella Ice Cream Seller

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Wed 23 & Thurs 24 April; Macready Theatre, Rugby, Thurs 29 & Fri 30 May

Cinderella Ice Cream Seller's producers - Little Seeds Music company - are promising that their imaginative retelling of the classic fairytale will capture children's hearts and tickle their tastebuds. LEARNING OPERA ON THE JOB

The internationally acclaimed Welsh National Opera (WNO) return to the Midlands next month to present Mozart's The Marriage Of Figaro and Benjamin Britten's Peter Grimes - both of which will showcase the immense talents of the company's chorus. What's On recently caught up with members of the WNO Associate Artist programme (both old and new) to find out more...

Soprano Eiry Price was a student when she watched her first opera - Welsh National Opera (WNO) performing Puccini's La bohème. From that moment, Eiry, who was studying at the Royal College of Music in London, knew how she wanted her future to look.

"I knew I wanted to sing," recalls Eiry, who hails from Pencaenewydd in North Wales, "but I didn't know before watching that opera that I wanted to be an opera singer, really specifically. It clicked for me there: 'I want to do this; I want to do what they're doing.' It came over me, the music, the text, the story. I remember listening to the orchestra, and with opera I always feel so overwhelmed with all these emotions, and it makes me feel something that I can't really describe. I just feel so whole after watching a piece of opera. It's also the drama, the tragedy, the love, the heartbreak - it just moves me."

Eiry's dream has come true, as she is currently a WNO Associate Artist, taking part in a one-year programme in which young singers are offered support, training and mentorship early in their careers.

"The Associate Artist programme is amazing for young singers who have left studies and want to pursue a career in opera. There are so many opportunities for me on this programme and so much support available." The scheme has introduced Eiry to a new world: "I'd never sung in a full opera before. I'd done opera scenes in college, but I've learnt so much already. I've had so many lessons and coachings and so much support that I feel like it's really shaping me into a young artist."

One of the advantages of being part of WNO's Associate Artist scheme is the chance to sing roles in their productions. This spring, Eiry plays the young lover Barbarina and covers the servant Susanna in Mozart's The Marriage Of Figaro. She also performs Second Niece in Benjamin Britten's Peter Grimes.

"I'm having coachings every day on the roles that I'm doing and just going through the music, adding layers to the roles, musically and artistically. It's all really helping, as I'm not doing it all by myself.

"I'm really excited for this production and looking forward to staging it with everyone. It's just a lovely atmosphere on the stage when you're all working together to try and create something amazing."

Soprano Harriet Eyley can vouch for the value of the programme, as she was an Associate Artist with WNO from 2018 to 2020. She too sang Barbarina and covered Susanna in The Marriage Of Figaro, as well as playing Oscar in Verdi's Un ballo in maschera and Norina in Donizetti's Don Pasquale.

"The biggest thing about being an Associate Artist is the sense of community at WNO," she says. "I grew so much as an artist through the company, and it feels like home. I think we always remember those first big jobs out of university, and I'm forever grateful.

"You are taught your musicianship and your stagecraft at university. I honed that with WNO, and I had so much stage and rehearsal experience. That was brilliant, but it was also about the sense of teamwork on a collaborative artform and working together. And not just in the rehearsal room with other singers and musicians but also with other people in the company."

After completing her Associate Artist programme, Harriet, who was born in Derbyshire, returned to WNO as a visiting artist to play Zerlina in Mozart's Don Giovanni and Krista in Janáček's The Makropulos Affair. This season, she's performing the page boy Cherubino in The Marriage Of Figaro.

"What's interesting with this one is that when we went into lockdown, I was actually doing this production of The Marriage Of Figaro for WNO. And now I feel like I've come full circle, because I'm coming back to The Marriage Of Figaro but in a different role. Cherubino is a role that I really wanted to sing. So I'm looking at the production from a different perspective. In so many ways I'm quite like Cherubino. Although I'm much older, I'm quite small in stature and quite flighty in character, so I'm looking forward to finding my teenage voice - 'am I in love, am I not in love, what is love?' I'm excited by the challenge."

For bass William Stevens, being a current

Associate Artist with WNO is giving him an incredible opportunity - to cover the lead role of Figaro and play him in the final tour performance of the Mozart opera.

"It's an amazing thing for any bass baritone, and a singer of my age, to be singing the title role in this opera with WNO," he says. "It's daunting but very exciting.

"It's an opera I know very well. I've sung all the roles I can sing in that opera at some point or another, and I've directed it for Bath Opera Company all around the South West. But to do it in a main production with this company is probably the biggest thing I will have done so far in my career. It's a lot of work but very exciting - and I will be filling out half of the theatre with my family!"

William, from Keynsham in Somerset, was a choral scholar at Bristol Cathedral and went on to study singing at the Royal Welsh College of Music & Drama in Cardiff. He has held a love for opera since childhood.

"WNO have been an important part of my life for quite a long time. I've been watching their productions since I was quite young. The first time I saw WNO was Madam Butterfly in 2009 at the Bristol Hippodrome. I'd listened to a lot of opera by then and had done a lot of singing but not much opera. I had recently joined Bristol Opera Company, so I got my first opportunity to be on stage performing opera as part of the chorus in The Pearl Fishers. I thought I should go and see it done at the professional level, and the most obvious option was to see WNO at the Hippodrome."

Being offered a place on the Associate Artist programme by the opera company he had watched so often was a real bonus.

"The opportunity to have this big stepping stone in my career with WNO was particularly special for me. We get to have multiple coachings with the music staff on the repertoire we're doing with the company but also anything we're doing outside the company, and they are fantastic.

"There's also just the exposure of working with a company at WNO's level. I've been working as a professional singer for a while now, but this is my first real exposure to a national company; seeing how differently it's run and what's expected of you at this level." William recently toured in WNO's production of Puccini's Gianni Schicchi. He is keen to take on Mozart.

"I think The Marriage Of Figaro is some of the best music ever written for theatre; it's just remarkable. Also, it's a genuinely funny opera. There are a lot of ridiculous scenarios and farcical things, but there's also a lot you can relate to: silly relationship misunderstandings and relationships between you and your boss, or vice versa if you're the boss. It's timeless, funny, with wonderful music, and it's so relatable."

Fellow WNO Associate Artist soprano Erin Rossington says the programme was the next step as she builds her opera career.

"An Associate Artist is, I describe it, like an apprenticeship," she says. "You are part of the company and they are guiding you on the way, advising and helping. You're also doing some roles and working alongside people in the prime of their career.

"I was one of the nuns in Suor Angelica, and it's nice to be part of a production and see how other people learn things and how they work. It's learning on the job."

Erin, who is from Llanfair Talhaiarn in North Wales, covers the role of Countess Almaviva throughout the tour of The Marriage Of Figaro, and played her in Swansea.

"It's amazing for me to have WNO on my CV; there's so much more weight around it. To say I've studied and learned the role of Countess with WNO [as opposed to] just by myself - there's a massive difference because someone has believed in you and someone has trusted in your work."

For Erin, the Countess is a fascinating character.

"This is one of the core roles for a soprano within the repertoire, and I'm really excited to explore her more. She's quite an interesting character. She's developed a lot from when we see her in Rossini's Barber Of Seville. Then she was young, excited and passionate, but now she's being mistreated by her husband, who is being unfaithful.

"She's not happy to put up with it, and she's not sitting down and taking it. I think she's a very strong woman, but she's also aware that if she did take a stance, it wouldn't go her way. She's not stupid."

Erin is eager to bring the Countess to life: "I can't wait to be able to sing on the stage with the cast. It's a fantastic cast, and to be able to perform alongside them will be really exciting. I'm looking forward to embracing the nerves and throwing myself into the character.

"It's also really nice knowing that Harriet, a previous Associate Artist, is coming back to the company. I love WNO, and being from North Wales, I would love to return to my home company in the future for sure. It's nice to know Harriet had the same start as me - that's a good omen."

Kiell Smith-Bynoe & Friends: Kool Story Bro

Birmingham Town Hall, Fri 25 April

Taskmaster, Ghosts and The Great British Sewing Bee star Kiell Smith-Bynoe drops in to Birmingham Town Hall late this month with an entourage of fast-thinking comedians and a surprise celebrity host.

Sold-out performances in Edinburgh, London and Brighton mark out Kool Story Bro as a show worth catching, with the talented ensemble using anecdotes provided by the audience to spin a host of totally unscripted and hugely ridiculous sketches.

The production makes use of a rotating cast of improvisers, including Starstruck's Lola-Rose Maxwell and Nic Sampson, and Afterlife and Austentatious' Graham Dickson. Previous special-guest hosts have included Lily Allen, Mo Gilligan, Mathew Baynton and Guz Khan.

Rainer Hersch Orkestra

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Sun 27 April

Theatre reviewers routinely wax lyrical about the Rainer Hersch Orkestra. And well they might; the talented ensemble of madcap virtuosos really are the final word in stand-up comedy/classical music crossovers (although, to be fair, they don't face much by way of competition in that particular genre!).

Rainer and his band of merry musicians will not only be putting their unique spin on a wide selection of much-loved classics when they visit Theatre Severn late this month, they'll also be putting some icing on their concert cake by inviting the Midlands' very own Alistair McGowan to join in the fun. Should be good.

Magical Bones

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Sat 26 April

Magical Bones' inspiration for his Britain's Got Talent audition back in 2020 came via the story of Henry Box Brown, a 19th-century slave who, prior to becoming a magician, had escaped a life in captivity by hiding inside a box and posting himself to a free state... With a man like Henry as his hero, there's little wonder the critically acclaimed magician, illusionist & Bboy - real name Richard Essien - is hitting the heights and turning some heads... A spellbinding evening of sleight-of-hand trickery awaits.

An evening of big songs, tall tales and bucketloads of glamour is very much in prospect when he makes two of three West Midlands stop-offs this month.

Comedy Hypnotist & Mind Reading Show

Old Joint Stock Theatre, Birmingham, Thurs 3 April

Now here's a theatrical production that does what it says on the tin. Described as 'the next Derren Brown' - and backed up by many a five-star review and some admiring words from comedian Jimmy Carr - Daniel Sinclair is here presenting 'a night of wonder and laughter'. Audience members are advised by Daniel's publicity to prepare themselves for a jaw-dropping, edge-of-the-seat experience.

Queer Planet Presented By Bi-Curious George

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Tues 22 April

An award-winning drag king with a keen interest in the natural world?

It can only be London's loveable nature boy, Bi-Curious George, who this month provides Midlands theatre-goers with the chance to run the rule over his critically acclaimed Edinburgh Fringe sell-out show.

With his stated desire being 'to shatter the heteronormative binaries through which we view the natural world', George describes the production as a love letter to nature, presented in the form of a documentary, and combining stand-up comedy with parody songs and drag.

Expect to be both entertained and educated - and to leave the venue knowing far more about dolphin orgies and gay giraffes than ever you did before you arrived.

Dance previews from across the region

Aakash Odedra Company Songs Of The Bulbul

Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 8 - Thurs 10 April

British South Asian dance star Aakash Odedra made a significant splash when he first appeared on the scene, quickly racking up collaborations with numerous high-profile choreographers, including Akram Khan, Sidi Larbi and Russell Maliphant.

Aakash's latest solo work is inspired by an ancient Sufi myth about a bulbul songbird. Captured and held in captivity, its melody serves as a metaphor for 'the fleeting moments of dance and an artist's life'.

The work is described by Aakash as a sensitive dialogue between Islamic poetry and Sufi kathak, a form of music that blends orchestral and Indian Classical tradition.

Warfare CERT tbc (95 mins)

Starring Joseph Quinn, Noah Centineo, Will Poulter, Cosmo Jarvis, Kit Connor, Charles Melton
Directed by Alex Garland and Ray Mendoza

Alex Garland's previous offering, Civil War - released last year and set in a fractured near-future America in violent conflict with itself - met with waves of critical acclaim. So there's plenty of excitement surrounding the release of this latest offering from the London-born filmmaker.

Co-written and co-directed with Ray Mendoza - an Iraq War veteran who acted as an advisor on Civil War - the film is a real-time recreation of an actual battle in which Mendoza was involved while stationed in Iraq. "It uses the traditional grammar of cinema," Garland told Entertainment Weekly. "Closeups, mids, wides, push-ins, shots wrapping around actors. It is a continuous action... so it's not shooting everything in one take, but it is real-time.

"It opened up the possibility, in a strange way, to stage something almost as if it's theatre."

Released Fri 18 April

The Penguin Lessons

CERT 12a (110 mins)

Expecting an easy ride, Tom Michell instead discovers a divided nation and a classroom of privileged but seemingly unteachable students.

But all is not lost... After rescuing an orphaned penguin from an oil-slicked beach, Tom's life is turned upside-down, and he soon finds himself undergoing both a personal and political awakening...

Sinners CERT tbc

Starring Jack O'Connell, Hailee Steinfeld, Michael B Jordan, Wunmi Mosaku, Lola Kirke, Delroy Lindo Directed by Ryan Coogler

Creed star Michael B Jordan here follows in the footsteps of Robert De Niro by taking on dual roles (De Niro did so in last month's The Alto Knights).

Jordan plays twin brothers Smoke and Stack as they try to leave their troubled lives behind them. Returning to their hometown to start again, they discover a darkness far greater than ever they could have imagined. Ryan Coogler - who here takes the directorial reins for the first time since helming Marvel's Black Panther films - has revealed that, although Sinners will definitely feature vampires, the movie has plenty else to recommend it.

"The film is very genre fluid," he told The Hollywood Reporter. "It switches in and out of a lot of different genres..."

"Yes, vampires are an element, but it's not the only supernatural element in the movie. The film is about more than just that."

Released Fri 18 April

The Legend Of Ochi

CERT PG (96 mins)

Starring Helena Zengel, Willem Dafoe, Emily Watson, Finn Wolfhard, Razvan Stoica, Carol Bors Directed by Isaiah Saxon

In a secluded northern village on the island of Carpathia, a farm girl named Yuri is taught to fear the reclusive creatures known as the Ochi. However, when she discovers a lost and injured baby Ochi, she sets off on a journey to return it to its family...

Premiered earlier this year at the Sundance Film Festival, the movie has received a mixed reception from the critics. But if you're in the market for a film that calls to mind fantasy-genre releases like The Dark Crystal and Neverending Story, it should definitely be worth an hour and a half of your time.

PIGS MIGHT FLY

Award-winning children's author Malorie Blackman talks about how science fiction can become reality...

A new stage adaptation of Malorie Blackman's 1997 children's novel, Pig Heart Boy, visits the Coventry Belgrade Theatre this month as part of a national tour. It's the story of 13-year-old Cameron, who has a heart condition and is in need of a transplant. Desperate to take part in normal activities, like other children of his age, Cameron must decide how far he will go to get his life back - and whether it's better to have a pig's heart that works than a human heart that doesn't. Multi-award-winning author Malorie here talks about the joys of seeing her novel adapted for the stage...

What originally inspired you to write Pig Heart Boy, Malorie?

Pig Heart Boy originally came about because I read a newspaper article by a doctor predicting that we'd soon have to start using animal organs for heart and kidney transplants due to a severe shortage of human donors - and I thought, what a wonderful idea for a story!

Before I started writing, I did a lot of research on transplants. There weren't many books about xenotransplantation at the time, but I was fortunate that a TV documentary called Your Life In Their Hands was airing, which provided useful insights into surgery and transplants.

The fact that Pig Heart Boy is now being adapted into a stage play is just amazing. When you read a book, you imagine the characters and their inner lives, but there's something magical about seeing real actors bring those characters to life on stage. It's almost like peeking into somebody's window and seeing that life unfold before you - and that's really special.

How does it feel to revisit this story such a long time after you wrote it?

I wrote Pig Heart Boy in the mid-90s, and back then xenotransplantation was still an idea the doctors were speculating about: would it ever happen? This type of transplant was still perceived as science fiction when I wrote the book. But then, a couple of years ago, surgeons in the US performed the first pig heart transplant. Unfortunately, I think the patient died a couple of weeks after the operation, but the doctors learned important lessons from it.

I've always loved science and exploring the subtle line between what's possible and what's probable. Many things once deemed 'science fiction' - like mobile-phone technology, for example - have now become reality. This evolving potential is what fascinated me about xenotransplantation.

What challenges did you face writing a children's story that deals with complex medical and ethical issues?

I had to make sure all medical details were correct, so I watched documentaries and read extensively about transplants. To keep the story relatable, I narrated it from [the main character] Cameron's perspective; a teenager facing these dilemmas. I also visited a lot of schools and talked to many children about how they felt about this subject. For me, there was no right or wrong; what I wanted to explore was 'what would you do in Cameron's shoes?' Many had reservations about animal transplants, even if they weren't vegetarians, which sparked lively debates about the ethics of it.

What I wanted to do with the book was to present Cameron and his own experiences. These are the choices he made; good or bad, right or wrong, these are his choices. What would you have done? Where do you think he got it right, where do you think he got it wrong? I hope the play sparks debate about xenotransplantation and how people feel about it, and what choices they would make. I think this approach is much more engaging than dictating what's right or wrong, especially for young readers.

What do you hope audiences will take away from the stage adaptation?

First and foremost, I'd like audiences to enjoy the show. But if there's a takeaway, I'd like it to be the importance of empathy and understanding for others who may be going through similar life experiences. I'd love audiences to consider not just the science, but also the ethics behind xenotransplantation, and ponder 'Would I be comfortable receiving an organ from an animal if needed? How would I feel about it?' I really hope audiences will understand why Cameron and his family made the choices they made, and feel connected to the story.

Do you think Pig Heart Boy can be used as a tool to discuss complex topics like this in the classroom?

I think teachers will be able to use both the novel and the play to spark discussions about these topics in a way that feels less intimidating. It's easier to discuss gritty topics when you're talking about somebody else, whether a real person or fictional characters. I think the idea of being able to watch a character, in this case Cameron, and what he's going through - why he decides to have the pig heart transplant and what it does to his life - makes it easier to discuss than just saying 'Let's talk about xenotransplantation' in the abstract. I think this makes the subject matter much more engaging and accessible.

When writing the book, how did you make sure your work would resonate with your audience?

I engaged with my target audience directly. I visited a number of schools and asked students questions like 'How would you feel about receiving an organ from an animal? Would you go along with it? If not, why?' This always led to interesting debates, with roughly half the room open to the idea and the other half opposed. As always, there was no right or wrong answer - I was just genuinely interested in their opinions. I wanted Cameron's thoughts on xenotransplantation to mirror how a real teenager might think. His family dynamic plays a role, too - he's aware of his own mortality, even as the adults around him try to shield him from it. Capturing that mix of maturity and vulnerability was essential for me.

When I was Children's Laureate, I spent a day at Great Ormond Street Hospital, where I saw how much the children understood their situations and prognoses. I believe it's crucial to give young people the chance to talk about or read about these issues, allowing them the space to express and process their feelings.

Elizabeth And Stanhope Forbes: A Marriage Of Art

Worcester City Art Gallery & Museum, Sat 5 April - Sun 29 June

Elizabeth and Stanhope Forbes were very much the power couple of British Impressionism, with both artists already well established and enjoying success at the time of their marriage in 1889. This brand-new exhibition features what's being described as a 'sumptuous' selection of their artworks. The show includes many pieces that are on loan from Penlee House Gallery & Museum, and which are visiting Worcester for the very first time.

Also on display in the exhibition is Stanhope's Chadding On Mounts Bay, one of the most widely admired and beloved paintings in Worcester City's Fine Art collection.

Emii Alrai: River Of Black Stone

Compton Verney, Warwickshire, until Sun 15 June

Blackpool-born and Yorkshire-based artist Emii Alrai produces sculptures and installations that imitate archaeological artefacts and which combine ancient mythologies from the Middle East with oral histories from her own Iraqi heritage. Her aim with her art is to highlight the contrast between the polished aesthetics of museums and the states of ruin which befall archaeological objects and the landscapes from which they are excavated.

Emii's Compton Verney commission sees her responding to the venue's nationally important Naples Collection. Through a sequence of darkening rooms, the artist dramatises the moment of archaeological discovery, at the same time considering 'themes of volcanic eruption and geological rupture as metaphors for our times'.

Suzanne Holtom: And Hills Bore Scars

New Art Gallery, Walsall, until Sun 29 June

"During the pandemic, I lost my dad," explains Suzanne Holtom, "and as a result, my trips back home to the West Midlands became far more frequent. It was this continuing return to my original home, contemplating and experiencing this embodied landscape, that initiated a new direction in my work."

A deep mapping of place - encompassing geological time, personal experiences, social histories and memory - has become the primary motivation in Suzanne's art.

The paintings featured in And Hills Bore Scars - which draw from 'geosites' in the Black Country Global Geopark - contemplate bodily forms, land masses, histories, patterns of energy and industry, layered materiality and shifting terrains.

Visitors to the gallery on Saturday 10 May can join Suzanne for a printmaking session and a tour of her exhibition.

PRISM Photography Open

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, until Sun 18 May

Selected from an open call organised with PRISM Photography network, this thought-provoking exhibition presents portraits and landscapes - and both political and personal stories - which explore the themes of belonging and interconnectedness.

Taking the subtitle A Celebration Of British Sculpture From The Ingram Collection, Beyond The Canvas explores the diverse styles and techniques that defined British sculpture throughout the 20th century.

The Ingram Art Foundation boasts one of the most significant collections of modern British art in the UK. The collection is here sharing space with pieces from the widely admired Rugby Collection.

The display is being presented as part of the gallery's 25th anniversary celebration.

Hrair Sarkissian: Other Pains

Wolverhampton Art Gallery, until Sun 22 June

"Keeping the same way of thinking is depressive," Hrair Sarkissian told whitehotmagazine.com. "I am someone who makes a lot of jokes, and my work is completely depressive, melancholic, and [tells] only sad stories. There is nothing that gives a positive feeling. It's all kinds of desperation."

An Armenian born in Syria and currently based in London, Hrair is considered one of the leading conceptual photographers of his generation. He also works with moving image, sculpture, sound and installation, conveying stories of conflict, displacement, loss and hope.

Comprising three bodies of work, Hrair's now-showing Other Pains exhibition features captivating landscapes and urban scenes which reflect sites of pain, trauma or melancholy, either from the artist's own personal history or the previous experiences of others.

Rembrandt: Masterpieces In Black And White

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Sun 1 June

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery is the only UK stop-off for this major new show, which marks the first time Rembrandt's etchings have been brought out of the Netherlands as a collection.

"We are delighted to be bringing his fascinating prints to Birmingham," says Epco Runia, head of collections at the Rembrandt House Museum, which has co-organised Masterpieces In Black And White with the American Federation of Arts. "With this exhibition, we hope to demonstrate that each of Rembrandt's prints is a work of art in its own right. If you take the time to look at them closely, a whole world opens up to you: a world in black & white, but with enormous visual richness."

Mahtab Hussain: What Did You Want To See

Ikon Gallery, Birmingham, until Sun 1 June

A new exhibition of work by Birmingham artist Mahtab Hussain, What Did You Want To See features photographs which celebrate the city's Muslim community. The installation includes portraits of Muslim people and places of worship, but also examines how cameras can be used as tools for surveillance.

"I want visitors to leave the exhibition questioning how they see the world and the people around them," explains Mahtab.

"I want them to think about visibility... what it truly means to witness someone, rather than observing them.

"I hope the show can challenge assumptions and create moments of recognition, and also make people look at Birmingham in a new way. If we can do that, I think that'll be a really lovely thing."

Coventry Open

Herbert Museum & Art Gallery, Coventry, until Sun 8 June

As with the previous dozen editions, the 13th Coventry Open showcases the creative prowess of artists throughout the West Midlands region. The exhibition features an eclectic mix of artworks created in a wide range of mediums.

FAB-U-LOUS!

Craig Revel Horwood talks about his latest touring show, in which he sings songs from his new album, Revelations...

He's known and loved by millions for getting to the point. And midway through our conversation, Strictly Come Dancing judge Craig Revel Horwood does just that...

He's talking about his new tour - Revelations - which is set to visit more than 50 theatres between the beginning of April and the end of June.

"This show is unlike anything I've ever done. People aren't going to see 'The judge, Craig'. They're going to see the real Craig. It's about my life; it's who I am. It's the most personal tour I've ever done."

Craig, who turned 60 in January, started out in musical theatre. His first-ever job was West Side Story. Music was in his life throughout his schooling in his native Australia. "It just seemed to be a very natural journey for me to go into musicals. I just loved performing in musicals until I was 30. People don't really know me as a singer because I've been in the background doing it, I suppose."

Other areas of his life took over. He became one of the UK's best and most influential directors and choreographers, winning Olivier Award nominations for Spend Spend and My One And Only. He directed the opening ceremonies of the 2002 Commonwealth Games in Manchester and was invited to join the judging panel for BBC's Strictly Come Dancing in 2004. As of 2025, he's Strictly's only original judge.

Strictly has made him a household name as a stringent rule-follower who has dished out more low scores of '1' than any other judge.

The show has also seen him become famous for catchphrases and unique locutions - from chah-chah-chah to fab-u-lous.

And yet there are many more strings to his diamante-encrusted bow, and singing is foremost among them. So when the opportunity arose last year to record an album of songs with the UK's leading musical theatre record label, Westway, he jumped at the chance.

"I thought: 'Come on, you're 60. Do it.' My mum's always told me to get an album together, and do something. So I thought: 'Yeah, I'll do it.' I grew up in the era before things were recorded - so there are no recordings of my earlier performances in theatre. No one had mobile phones and all of that malarkey back then. Now, everything is recorded, no matter what you do. I walk out the hotel room, and it's recorded by someone."

So Craig went into the studio and recorded Revelations - Songs Boys Don't Sing. The release is a stunning collection of tunes that showcases a marvellous, emotive, pitch-perfect voice. His interpretations of such songs as Memory show a discombobulating degree of warmth and empathy. Don't Rain On My Parade reveals him as the ultimate razzle-dazzle showman, while As Long As He Needs Me, from Oliver!, is a song that takes on new meaning with Craig's thoughtful tenderness.

Just like the Great British public, who gave the singer his first chart hit, Craig was thrilled. "Singing is such a liberating experience. Each song on the album means something to me. You know, the first-ever musical that my mum went to see with the kids was Jesus Christ Superstar, so I've recorded I Don't Know How To Love Him.

"Waltzing Matilda is in there because I was born in Australia, and when we grew up, it was like a national anthem.

"I want to talk about the songs that I love and the reasons they are still with me and in my life. I know I've written three autobiographies, but my autobiographies were always about how I got Strictly. This show, for me, is strictly about music and my passion and love for it.

"That's what drives my life, and it's just so nice to be able to get up there and sing and entertain people, because that's what I was born to do."

Many of the songs will be familiar to Craig's fans - and will have a special place in their heart, just as they do in Craig's.

"I wanted to do Memory, from Cats, because I was in that show, but I'd never get to sing that song because I'd obviously never get the part of Grizabella. It's the same with As Long As He Needs Me, from Oliver! It just goes without saying, you know, that I'll never play Nancy.

"So the record, and the tour, gives me an opportunity to sing songs that I know and love. The show will be about my love for the music and how it's affected my life. It'll be about relationships, too, because we all go through the same emotions in relationships.

"I'll be talking about that, and heartbreak, and where it can lead. You know, Adele has proven how much emotion heartbreak can evoke, not just for singers, but for the audience, too."

Craig will be joined on stage by super-talented musician Ben Goddard, who fans will recall from their double-act on Celebrity Gogglebox. He can't wait to hang out with one of his best mates, and is expecting plenty of laughter along the way.

"The tour will be the opportunity to have a good time along with Ben, who I love. I've worked with him quite a lot, directing with him, and we did a one-man show together, which was hilarious.

"For me, this is about the real Craig Revel Horwood, not the judge Craig Revel Horwood. It's about my life before I became a judge, and then my life after being a judge, because that, of course, is the only thing that I'm famous for."

Here's the thing. Music is our universal language. All of us have songs that we love - and for a myriad of reasons. In Craig's case, listening to his selection of favourite songs, and understanding the meanings of them, helps us get to know him. So, for instance, My Way is a song he associates with his father's death and is deeply personal.

"That was my father's favourite song, and I had to sing it when he died, just before Christmas, 10 years ago. And I've been singing that sort of ever since in pantomime, but it always reminds me, you know, of my father, because that was one of his favourite tunes.

"So there's a lot of emotion behind each one of the songs that I sing, which I think is good, you know. And there's a lot of fun in there as well, because, of course, I have nothing really to do with Disney, The Lion King."

There will be other tributes during the show, including to The Vivienne and Paul O'Grady, both of whom were artists that Craig knew and admired. And, of course, there'll be plenty of Strictly.

"It's been Fab-U-Lous to have been there since the start. None of us could ever have believed it would become the phenomenon that it did. It's been a huge part of my life and the reason that people know me. So yes, of course I'll be talking about Strictly. I don't think people would forgive me if I didn't."

At a time in life when many are slowing down, or reaching a happy and stable plateau, Craig continues to chase his dreams. "Recording taught me so many things. It taught me how to be quiet; it taught me how to add more emotion into the sound of my voice as well. It's not that I wanted to sound like Barbra Streisand or Shirley Bassey, you know, but I had to discover who I was. Who is Craig Revel Horwood, and what is his sound and what is his voice?"

"I think a lot of artists come across that. Human League has a certain sound. Rod Stewart had the raspy sound. But I thought, what is Craig Revel Horwood's sound? Singing is about having an amazing vocal quality, rather than a pitch-perfect voice. I mean, Dame Judi Dench once came on stage and sang Send In The Clowns. No, she's not a singer. She's never been able to sing. But because of her commitment to the character, to the emotion, it came across brilliantly. That was one of the best renditions of Send In The Clowns I've ever heard."

And now it's time to hit the road. Craig is more than happy to temporarily ditch the comfort of his judge's chair on Strictly, or the comfort of a West End theatre, to head into the regions.

"The reason I love touring is that it takes me to the people, and I get to see the country. It's about that as much as meeting people and learning because, you know, in certain areas, you'll get different audiences.

"I'm going to 53 theatres around the country in three months, so it's pretty full-on. There are some places I've been before that I can't wait to return to, and those places I've never been. It's going to be great, and I'm really looking forward to it."
